

Moral Ban on Providing Data On Plane Gas to Some Nations

Hits Countries Making Unprovoked Raids on Civilians

NONE IS NAMED

Includes Plans, Plants, Manufacturing Rights And Information

Washington (AP)—The state department laid down today a moral embargo on the export to "certain countries" of plans, plants, manufacturing rights or technical information for the production of high quality aviation gasoline.

Without naming any countries, the department announced that the embargo applies to "countries the armed forces of which are engaged in unprovoked bombing or machine-gunning of civilian populations from the air."

The announcement continued: "The department, after consultation with the war and navy departments, has decided that for the time being there should be no further delivery to certain countries of plans, plants, manufacturing rights, or technical information, required for the production of high quality aviation gasoline."

Previous action
Previous administration measures had applied to Russia and Japan a moral embargo against acquisition of airplanes in this country, on the ground that their forces in Finland and China, respectively, had bombed civilian populations.

Today's action was said to amount to an extension of the older policy but whether countries other than Russia and Japan were affected was not made clear immediately.

The state department said its decision on aviation gasoline was reached "with a view to conserving in this country certain technical information of strategic importance and as an extension of the announced policy of this government in regard to the sale of airplanes, aeronautical equipment, and materials essential to airplane manufacture to countries the armed forces of which are engaged in unprovoked bombing or machine-gunning of civilian populations from the air."

Youth Confesses Cemetery Slaying

Admits Shooting Eau Claire Service Station Operator Dec. 8

Eau Claire (AP)—District Attorney Connor Hansen announced today that Gerald Gaustad, 17, had confessed to slaying Marshall Brenden, Eau Claire service station operator, in a cemetery here Dec. 8.

Hansen immediately issued a warrant charging the youth with first degree murder.

Gaustad pleaded guilty in county court to this charge and was held without bail for sentencing in circuit court.

The district attorney said the boy related that he and a girl companion, whose name the youth refused to tell, had hidden in the back of Brenden's automobile with the intention of robbing the 39-year-old man, that Gaustad had slugged Brenden, shot him accidentally and then in panic fired a second bullet into his head.

Gaustad's signed confession, as disclosed by Hansen, declared that the youth, sorry he had planned the robbery, argued with Brenden for about an hour in an attempt to get him to "keep the whole thing quiet" and let the young couple go without informing authorities.

Labor Seeking Larger Payments To Unemployed

A.F.L. and C.I.O. Would Increase Benefits to Insured Jobless

Washington (AP)—The American Federation of Labor joined the C.I.O. today in a campaign to enlarge benefits paid by the unemployment compensation system to workers insured against involuntary idleness.

The action came in the wake of a renewed expression of President Roosevelt's hope that the labor organizations would end their differences. The chief executive told reporters yesterday he had discussed labor peace with C.I.O. leader John L. Lewis and that although there was no concrete development in the conference, Lewis, too, expressed hope of a solution.

Green Favors Study
The drive for greater jobless insurance benefits was stimulated by A. F. of L. President William Green, who asked all state federations of labor to help win congressional approval for an advisory committee of experts to examine the adequacy of the insurance system.

Green said an average of only 54 cents had been paid out in worker benefits for each dollar collected by taxes from employers.

Treasury reports disclosed that up to Nov. 30, state collections for jobless insurance deposited in a federal trust fund totaled $2,700,541, out of which $805,065.524 had been paid in compensation benefits to insured idle workers.

Green's move followed a request by Lewis that Secretary Perkins begin an investigation of the system because the benefits were inadequate and the state plans "unduly complicated."

The separate moves by the rival labor organizations came coincidentally with disclosures that the social security board's bureau of employment security already had undertaken an extensive study of jobless insurance.

Says China Beginning Series of Offensives Against Jap Invaders

Washington (AP)—Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese ambassador to Washington, told President Roosevelt today that China was beginning a series of offensives on all fronts against her Japanese invaders.

The diminutive, stocky ambassador, making his first call at the White House since September, told reporters:

Would Submit Courthouse to Popular Vote

Petition in Circulation For Special Board Session

NEEDS 27 SIGNERS

Move May Block Plans for Construction of New Building

Construction of a new Outagamie county courthouse was back in the realm of uncertainty today, less than a month after it was approved.

A petition demanding a special session of the Outagamie county board at which a referendum on the courthouse would be proposed is being circulated among supervisors.

The board at its November meeting voted, 29-24, to build a new $525,000 courthouse through a $385,000 bond issue and use of the $140,000 building trust fund.

The names of 27 supervisors would have to be affixed to the petition in order to authorize a special session, there being 53 members on the county board.

Senator Mike Mack, Shiocott, chairman of the board, said today that he understood the petition this morning carried the names of 28 supervisors.

The board chairman said he himself signed the petition and remarked: "I'm in favor of the courthouse, but if the people out in the country don't want it, I don't want to see them forced to it. That is the way the building committee feels about it. They don't want to force anything on the taxpayers."

Years of discussion on the new building were apparently ended Nov. 28 when the board voted to build a new structure.

The resolution providing the levy for payment of bonds was adopted by the board by a 31-22 vote at that time. The bond issue would be paid off at the rate of $38,000 a year for nine years, starting in 1941, with the balance the 10th year. Interest on the bonds would not exceed two per cent a year.

Supervisor John Bottensek of Dale, who led the opposition, proposed cancelling the courthouse trust fund with annual appropriations and to build when the county had enough money without borrowing.

HELD IN SLAYING
Ernest Kehler, 24, Canadian-born boxer, who allegedly signed a 15-page confession that he killed Dr. Walter Engelberg, 42, first secretary of the German consulate, on Dec. 5, was brought to New York from Toronto, Canada, today to face homicide charges. According to the purported confession, Kehler (above) bludgeoned Dr. Engelberg to death in the mad agent's Brooklyn home in a blind fury aroused when Dr. Engelberg's behavior became offensive to him.

Recall Petitions Against Washburn Are Ruled Invalid

Judge Holds Petitions Should Have Named Officers Who Got Extra Pay

Recall petitions against Mayor A. A. Washburn, Clintonville, were held invalid in a decision filed in Waupaca county circuit court today by Judge Walter Schinz of Milwaukee. The case was heard at Waupaca, Oct. 3.

Judge Schinz ruled that the petitions bearing 607 signatures, were legally insufficient in setting forth a complaint against Mayor Washburn by the Clintonville Taxpayers' league.

It was understood, however, that the court's decision in the case contained nothing which would deny the taxpayers' league the right to circulate new recall petitions.

The league charged in the petitions that Washburn illegally had permitted "certain city officers" to draw pay for extra services in addition to their regular salaries.

Judge Schinz declared the petitions should have named the officers.

In separate decisions filed in circuit court Monday, Judge Schinz ruled that Clifford Mullarky, former city attorney, and Aldermen Albert Winter and Louis Krause should repay the city of Clintonville a total of $635 received in addition to their salaries.

The complaint, filed by the taxpayers' league in 1938 charged Krause accepted $450 in salary from a position with the municipal utility to which he was appointed after being elected alderman. He received $80 per month over a 5-month period. Krause still holds the post.

Mullarky was charged with unlawfully receiving a fee of $122.13 for collecting delinquent taxes and Winter with accepting $63 for assisting the assessor.

Unified Air Defense System Being Planned

Washington (AP)—The army announced plans today to create "in the near future" a system of unified air defense commands to coordinate all means of defense against air raids.

Crew of Scuttled German Ship Bound for New York Aboard American Cruiser

Capt. Langsdorff, Spee Commander, Shoots Himself

Takes Own Life at Naval Arsenal After Conference With His Officers

Buenos Aires—(By Telephone to New York (AP)—Captain Hans Langsdorff, sorrowing over the loss Sunday of his prized battleship Admiral Graf Spee, shot himself to death with a revolver.

The German embassy, announcing his suicide, said his body was found this morning at 8:30 a. m. (5:40 a. m. C.S.T.).

Captain Langsdorff, the embassy said, took his life at the naval arsenal last night.

"He sacrificed his life for the fatherland," said an embassy communique.

The embassy statement said: "The commander of the glorious pocket battleship, Captain Hans Langsdorff, sacrificed his life for the fatherland last night, eliminating himself voluntarily as he himself told in a letter addressed to the German ambassador."

"From the first moment he made up his mind to share the fate of his magnificent ship."

Detained At Arsenal
"Overcoming his intimate desire in consideration of responsibility resting upon him to ensure the safe embarkation of his crew composed of more than a thousand young men and pending full knowledge of regulations to affect these seamen, he postponed fulfillment of his designs."

Langsdorff was detained at the naval arsenal after he reached Argentina with more than 1,000 of his men from Uruguay, where the Graf Spee was captured.

Manila (AP)—Heavy loss of life in Isabela and Cagayan provinces was predicted tonight as a result of flooding of the Cagayan river.

Hundreds were homeless. Much livestock was lost. There was heavy destruction of rice and tobacco crops in a wide area flooded by torrential rains which accompanied a typhoon.

The postmaster at Ilagan, Isabela province, reported the flood may exceed the record inundation of 1938 in which hundreds were drowned.

The Cagayan river is the largest in the Philippines.

Belief there would be "enormous" loss in human life, crops and livestock was expressed by the postmaster.

Finns Fighting Soviet Army In Arctic Area; Danish Report Says Russian Battleship Sunk

Helsinki (AP)—Finnish officials announced tonight that scores of Russian tanks had been destroyed and more than twenty enemy planes shot down when the red army launched a "gigantic attack" with hundreds of tanks on the Karelian Isthmus.

Ten tanks were destroyed behind the Finnish lines, authorities said, and several scores within the Russian lines. More than 200 airplanes participated in the attack, they added.

Helsinki (AP)—Finland called to the colors all able-bodied men of 40 years of age today as military sources declared Russian troops had been thrown back close to their own frontier on the Karelian Isthmus and Soviet bombers renewed raids on Finnish cities.

(Blizzards and temperatures 25 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, said dispatches from Kirkenes, Norway, near the Finnish frontier, apparently have paralyzed a Russian drive in northern Finland. The Finns, hitherto retreating in this sector, were said to be preparing a new fortified line south of Lake Inari.)

Today's mobilization order was the first going outside the normal classes of reservists.

The call probably adds 20,000 to the Finnish forces, which were authoritatively estimated at 400,000 at the start of the war. Finnish reports have placed the strength of the opposing red army forces as high as 1,500,000.

Previous mobilization calls, the last Dec. 15, included all able-bodied men up to the age of 40.

Columbus Is Burned, Abandoned to Escape British

Liner Sunk Within Neutrality Zone, Washington Experts Find

Washington (AP)—A message received by the navy from the cruiser Tuscaloosa, heading for New York with the crew of the German liner Columbus, said: "Fire island ship abeam 11 o'clock. Encountering dense fog and rain. May have to anchor."

Washington (AP)—After burning and abandoning their luxurious 32,000-ton ship at the approach of a British man-of-war, 579 crew members of the German liner Columbus were being sped to Ellis Island today by an American cruiser.

The blazing derelict, one-time queen of the German merchant fleet, was left alone to sink beneath the Atlantic waves in a cloud of steam.

The Columbus, which failed in a desperate dash for Europe from Vera Cruz, Mexico, already was settling when the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa completed a dramatic rescue at dusk yesterday 400 miles east of Cape Henry, Va. Only two German sailors were known to have been lost.

Possible Internment
The survivors, including nine women, were awaited in New York harbor for examination by immigration officials. If they are found to be bona fide merchant seamen, they can remain at liberty in the United States for 90 days.

First information yesterday from Stephen Early, White House press secretary, was that the scuttling had taken place outside the American neutrality zone. But later, a report calculation of the ship's position given by the Tuscaloosa showed that the Columbus sank nearly 250 miles inside the zone, a line due east of Washington.

In terse wireless messages to his superiors, Captain Harry A. Baft of the Tuscaloosa reported the liner was being scuttled and that a British destroyer was nearby, although there was no evidence of fighting.

Sea Vessels Open
The crew already had pulled away from the sinking vessel in 22 lifeboats, and the American cruiser stood by until all the occupants were picked up. The liner's sea valves were open, to hasten her sinking.

The Columbus was found only a few hours after the German freighter Arauca outran a British cruiser and steamed into the harbor at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Captain Frederick Stengler of the 4,354-ton Arauca said a warning shot was fired across the bow when his ship was within United States territorial waters.

The ship, a German freighter, was being scuttled and was outstripped later in the fleet only by the Bremen and Europa. She was 749 feet long and was equipped to carry 1,800 passengers and a crew of 750.

Mexican officials said while she was at Veracruz, several members of the crew deserted on the grounds that the food was running low and that they were used as slave labor. "Slaves" was expressed in a clear York marine circles that the Columbus was ordered back to Germany because Nazi officials were elated over the Bremen's success in eluding the British blockade.

News of her scuttling shocked New York officials of the North German Lloyd Lines, which owned the ship. John H. Schroeder, New York manager, said: "Oh, my God! It's one blow after the other."

Waives Hearing in Accidental Shooting
Rhinelander (AP)—Bruno Kahle, Tomahawk logger charged with manslaughter, waived preliminary examination in county court today and was bound over to circuit court.

The charge is based on the death of Fred Crandall, Cassian farmer, who was killed in a deer hunting accident last month.

District Attorney George A. Richards said Kahle had admitted shooting at Crandall, whose species he had mistaken for the sport of a deer.

Wagner Act Is Called 'Menace' To U. S. Welfare

Manufacturers' Body Committee Urges Sweeping Changes

Washington—(AP)—A committee of the National Association of Manufacturers declared today that the Wagner act and its administration by the national labor relations board are "a menace to the national welfare."

Recommending sweeping changes, the committee said the act was based on "false assumptions" which "have frequently been magnified and accentuated by one-sided and biased administration."

The manufacturers' statement described as "definitely encouraging" the work of the house committee investigating the labor board, which recessed its hearings last night after two committee members charged "entrapment" of the Inland Steel company into violating the labor law.

Nathan Witt, florid-faced board secretary, denied this was true but acknowledged that, before any charges were filed, he had made suggestions to C. I. O. union officials as to the "quickest way" to get a board decision on the case.

Witt, who was the board's assistant general counsel at the time, said he was not involved in the case and that his idea was to speed up action toward settlement of the 1937 "Little Steel" strike, involving Inland and other companies.

Representative Routhon (R.-Ohio) promptly commented that if entrapment were not involved, he did not understand the English language. Representative Black (R.-Ind.) joined in the criticism.

Report on Results of WPA Survey on Farm Use of Electricity

Madison—(AP)—The public service commission said today a study made by WPA workers under its supervision indicated that Wisconsin farmers using small amounts of electricity got lower rates from rural electric cooperatives than from public utilities.

"For consumptions of 40 to 50 kilowatt-hours per month, the cooperatives offered the lowest rates, while the average bills charged by utilities were the lowest for consumptions of 100, 150 and 250 kilowatt-hours per month," the report said.

Included in the study were 18 electric cooperatives, 15 privately owned and five municipally owned utilities, which together supplied about 92 per cent of all electricity used on Wisconsin farms, the commission said.

Municipally owned utilities had the lowest average rates for consumptions of 100 kilowatt-hours a month, the report added. "From 1933 to 1938 the cost of electricity used on Wisconsin farms decreased from 7.31 cents to 5.38 cents per kilowatt-hour, a drop of 26.4 per cent," the report said. "At the same time, use of electricity on farms climbed from 67 to 92 kilowatt-hours a month, an increase of 37.4 per cent."

Warns Motorists, Pedestrians of Winter Hazards

Madison—(AP)—George W. Rickman, director of the motor vehicle department, warned motorists and pedestrians of winter hazards today as snow fell generally over the state.

"Research has proved inadequate traction and reduced visibility are the two primary hazards of winter, and all drivers should check their automobiles to see that they are ready for bad weather," he said.

He advised checking brakes, traveling at less than moderate speed on icy surfaces, leaving safe distances between moving cars, slowing speed on curves, and "pumping brakes" when stopping.

Pedestrians, he said, should walk slowly and avoid icy spots especially on stairs.

Former Commission Secretary Kills Self

Madison—(AP)—J. Edward Usher, 61, former secretary of the state tax commission, hanged himself at his home last night, Coroner Wayne Fisher said.

Usher was secretary of the tax commission from Jan. 15, 1930, until July 1, 1937, being promoted to supervising clerk when the commission was reorganized. He was transferred to the beverage tax division and left the state service last January.

He was secretary of Chief Justice Marvin B. Rosenberry of the supreme court from 1916 to 1920, and later was clerk of Dane county court.

The coroner said he was informed Usher had been in poor health. Survivors include the widow and three sons.

Some reports said the warship had fired across the bow of the tanker. In foreground here is the Arauca, waiting for a pilot to take it into Port Everglades. In background, circled, is the warship, which flew the British flag but could not be identified, waiting helplessly outside the three-mile limit.

State's Attorney of New Mexico Joined Associated Adjusters

Milwaukee—(AP)—An Associated Adjusters membership application blank, signed with the name of the New Mexico attorney general, was included among correspondence introduced yesterday into the federal court trial of Jennings B. Momen, former president of Associated Adjusters, Inc., who is charged with mail fraud.

The document showed that a man who signed his name as Frank H. Patton, of New Mexico, paid $5 to the firm in 1937 after offering as references the names of a New Mexico supreme court justice and a district judge.

The government alleges that thousands of persons paid $5 fees to the firm which promised to train them as insurance adjusters, indicated they would have exclusive 100-mile territories, and advertised that adjusters could earn $200 a month. The prosecutors charge that employment seldom materialized and that territories were not exclusive.

Momen has contended he ran a legitimate business, but testified he found the firm's affairs in "horrible shape" after he bought out his partner, William Cressy, who is now serving a federal prison term on another mail fraud charge.

Slayer of Bride Claims 3 Murders

Missouri Officers Skeptical but They'll Investigate Story

Jefferson City, Mo.—(AP)—Charles Garner, who confessed he drowned his bride of 20 days "for the notoriety," now volunteers that he killed three men—two of them because of a quarrel over an all-night date with his wife-to-be.

Officers were skeptical but began an immediate investigation because "it all checks so far."

"I want to get the matter off my mind. I prefer death to life imprisonment," Garner told Warden Tom Scott and newspapermen in Missouri penitentiary. He is serving a life term for his bride's death.

Then he calmly related a story of shooting, poisoning and drowning that began last summer when he was a garbage hauler in York, Neb. Garner asserted he:

Shot Alvin Collingham June 1 because he objected to Garner's all-night date with his sister, Jean Collingham.

Poisoned a neighbor, Clem Hall, who "bet I knew something about" Collingham's death.

Drowned Jean in a Liberal, Mo., quarry pool July 2, 20 days after their marriage because "she was the only one who knew" of the two slayings at York.

Showed a stranger to death under a freight car near Kansas City.

Collingham's death was pronounced suicide and Clem's was attributed to heart failure. Both occurred last June.

Garner's death was recorded as accidental until Garner voluntarily told Gering, Neb., officials he had drowned her.

Recommend Purchase Of Boiler Regulator

The board of public works yesterday recommended the purchase of a boiler regulator for the sewage treatment plant from the Fannon trading company at a cost of $110.

The regulator will be installed on the boiler in the sewage control building. The board's report will be before the common council tonight.

Capt. Langsdorff, Spee Commander, Shoots Himself

Spee was scuttled on Adolf Hitler's orders Sunday.

At 9:30 last night Langsdorff called his staff officers into consultation. For three hours they talked.

When the meeting broke up, the slightly-broiled Captain Langsdorff gravely shook hands with each of his men, making a complete circle of the Nazi officers assembled before him.

Then he went to his room, leaving word he was not to be disturbed because he was tired.

An aide entered his room at 8:30 this morning and found the captain dead.

The German ambassador and Argentine authorities were immediately notified. The ambassador did not give the German crew word of their commander's fate until he had communicated it to the Argentine minister of war.

At noon the crew, confined at the naval arsenal, was summoned and the announcement of Captain Langsdorff's death was made to them.

German embassy attaches said the captain's death had been expected

Decision of Allied War Chiefs To Aid Finland Bids Fair to Have Extensive Consequences

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(AP)—The allied supreme war council's reported decision to give Finland all possible aid in her war with Russia seems to line England and France up very definitely on the side of the little republic, and consequently over the fence from the communists.

This action, if officially confirmed, bids fair to have far-reaching consequences. It gives to wonder more than ever whether Europe is headed for enlargement of the Hitlerian conflict.

The council's decision represents, of course, a formal response to the request of the League of Nations the other day that its members assist the Finns. This was when the Soviet union was expelled from the marble halls of the peace organization on a charge of aggression against her tiny neighbor.

Both England and France at that time announced their intention to comply with the request. The action of the war council, however, turns this announcement into a formal and powerful instrument, and one which is to be wielded jointly by the Anglo-French brotherhood, rather than separately.

Attitude Changes This naturally means that the allies, having prior to the Russo-Finnish clash done everything possible to avoid drawing the Muscovites into the Hitlerian conflict, finally have decided that the Soviet has overstepped the mark and must be checked. Therefore the Finns get help, let the consequences be what they may.

The communist press, by the way, not only charges Anglo-French imperialism with having encouraged Finland to go to war, but claims the allies were back of the drastic action taken by the League of Nations against Russia. The Muscovites will be long in forgiving that expulsion.

It looks as though Finland might have a fair Christmas after all. She has the trees, the snow and the reindeer but has been praying for the Santa Claus who now appears to be on his way. Aid will come as a godsend to the Finns, whose small hands are more than full with trying to beat back the forces invading from both north and south.

military observers believe the allies will give help in guns and fighting planes, rather than try to send an expeditionary force. The muscovites can be flown, whereas it would be difficult to move troops, in view of the mined waters and the obstacles due to the neutrality of Norway and Sweden.

In sending airplanes the allies will be giving up one of the things they need most themselves.

However, many observers hold that whatever aid England and France give Finland now will be just so much aid for themselves later on.

Which is to say the idea is growing that sooner or later the British and French will have to settle accounts with Russia anyway.

It is an interesting circumstance that the Russian expansion westward is being viewed by Mussolini through glasses of the same color as those used by the allies. And it is significant that he regards the Soviet advance as sufficiently menacing so that he also has been giving help to Finland.

That looks like a long way off if Duce's beat, when you gauge it merely by the map. But if Finland falls, this may open the way for the communist flood to sweep not only westward but down through the Balkans, which Mussolini regards as within his sphere of influence. So he, like the allies, has set to work on the Finnish levee to keep it from breaking.

And here it might be added that there are many observers who believe Mussolini may continue to labor increasingly along the same lines as England and France, not only in Finland but elsewhere.

The Finns already have had some military supplies. Early this month London arranged to allow Finland 30 fighting planes and a "considerable quantity" of other war materials.

At the same time it was reported that 50 Italian planes had been delivered to Finland by air. What was more important, Italian sources in Geneva said Italian army pilots and ground crews had accompanied the planes. These sources added that Mussolini probably would give the Finns "all aid within reason."

effects, leaving behind all other valuables, the majority probably under impression it was a drill.

Weather Clear "Life boats were lowered in orderly manner as flames shot skyward followed by clouds of dense black smoke," the report continued. "There was a moderate swell, the weather was clear and crisp. Life boats stood away from Columbus in orderly groups as Tuscaloosa came up to rescue survivors, British destroyer standing by to assist as needed."

"Embarkation of Tuscaloosa was effected by means of sea ladders, without confusion or injury, as the sun sank below the horizon."

"Survivors are in good spirits despite ordeal. Senior officer of Columbus reported all hands were mustered into life boats and again on coming on board Tuscaloosa. Life boats were cast adrift as Tuscaloosa turned toward New York passing close aboard Columbus, a blazing inferno and sinking slowly."

"A subsequent check discloses two firemen unaccounted for. Survivors were given hot meal, cigarettes, and warm quarters. Difficulties incident to crowding was lessened by general spirit of friendly cooperation. Passage uneventful except encountering heavy fog and rain off approaches to New York."

Wheeler Seen as Strong Candidate

May Carry Democratic Standard If Roosevelt Doesn't Seek Office

Washington—(AP)—Senator Thomas (D.-Okla.), an advocate of a third term for President Roosevelt, said today that he would support Senator Wheeler (D.-Mont.) for the Democratic presidential nomination if Mr. Roosevelt does not run.

He expressed the belief that Wheeler could count "almost to a man" on the support of progressive, farm, labor and former-soldier groups, adding that the Montana senator's opposition to the Roosevelt court bill in 1937 had "put him in good-standing with the ultra-conservatives."

"The administration has no reason to be against Wheeler save for the court fight," Thomas continued, "and now the administration has won the court fight."

He alluded, he said, to the fact that the president had filled four vacancies on the court and will make his fifth appointment soon.

While Thomas was praising Wheeler to reporters, Wheeler himself made it plain that he did not intend to become an active candidate until Mr. Roosevelt discloses his plans.

Dickinson Would Give No Relief to Automobile Owners

Lansing, Mich.—(AP)—Welfare clients who operate automobiles should be denied relief, Governor Luren D. Dickinson of Michigan said today, expressing belief that county welfare boards have the right to take such action.

The 80-year-old executive, long an anti-saloon league leader, added that he saw no reason for relief recipients to spend money for beer or liquor.

"There are many people who can't afford to drive a car who pay their taxes to support persons on welfare who do drive cars," Dickinson asserted. "There's no sense to it."

Gus T. Hartman, state budget director, said cooperation of county boards in enforcing such a policy might be difficult to obtain.

Lawrence Blames Cincinnati Papers For Missing Story

Labor Board Reprimand Got Little Notice in Press, He Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Why was the news of an important decision of the circuit court of appeals at Cincinnati, which reprimanded the labor board for its conduct in the Empire Furniture company case, omitted from the wires of all three major press associations of the United States? The house committee investigating the labor board and the Wagner act has been trying to find the answer. Questioning of Philip G. Phillips, regional director at Cincinnati for the labor board, has brought out the fact that Mr. Phillips did claim to have prevented in another instance the publication of a news article in one of the Cincinnati papers, and that he had access to various newspaper reporters in the American Newspaper Guild, an affiliate of the CIO, and boasted that he felt grateful to Guild members "for putting us wise to what goes on behind the scenes."

There is no evidence in the record of the Smith committee here that Mr. Phillips or any members of the American Newspaper Guild were in any way responsible for the omission from American newspapers generally of the important facts in the circuit court of appeals decision in the Empire Furniture company case.

No Explanation
But there still is no explanation as to why this case did not get circulation until more than two weeks later, when attention was called in these dispatches to the omission. The opinion of the court was rendered on Nov. 8. On that same afternoon, the Cincinnati Times-Star published a brief routine item which made no mention of the rather sensational quotations in the decision. The next morning, the Cincinnati Enquirer printed on page 10 a routine article with one quotation from the decision, but omitting all reference to the fact that a unanimous court, including Judge Florence Allen, a liberal judge widely known for her sympathies with labor, concurred in the opinion of Judge Simons, or to the fact that the opinion accused the board of having attempted to substitute "surmise" and "guess" for "proof" in evaluating the testimony.

The three national press associations are dependent, as a rule, for their clues to important news developments on the accounts in local newspapers. The press associations do not employ special staffs to cover the courts or other sources of news from which only occasionally a sensational piece of news might emanate. If the local papers "play down" or bury an article, the chances are that it will be overlooked by the correspondents and the press associations who supply out-of-town newspapers and services.

Mr. Phillips, on the stand, told the house committee that he had inquired at the office of the Associated Press about the Empire case when criticism was raised about it two weeks after the decision was handed down, and that the Associated Press men said the item was overlooked because of the congestion of news and concentration of attention on a local election the day of the decision in question. But Mr. Phillips was not asked and did not volunteer the information as to why all three press associations overlooked the same item. The reason probably was that, by a reading of the routine headlines and cursory report of the Empire Furniture case as published in the Cincinnati papers, the significance of the decision was not apparent.

May Be Coincidence
The episode may be just a curious coincidence due to faulty reporting by the Cincinnati newspapers which failed to note that the labor board had been reprimanded for reaching conclusions on "surmise" and "guess" rather than proof, and that it may be a coincidence, too, that the regional director of the labor board had expressed previously in memoranda to the board at Washington that he felt he could keep out of the press certain items "derogatory" to the board. It so happens that no copy of the Cincinnati decision was available to the press at the office of the labor board in Washington either, until Nov. 20, but Mr. Phillips claims he sent it to Washington a day or so after it was handed down on Nov. 8. The board here does not consider that it is supposed to issue to the press, court decisions on labor matters that happen in other cities, though here, before it has not failed to make these decisions available promptly. The delay of nearly two weeks may have been an incident in the routine of the labor board's operations in Washington. The fact remains that both at Cincinnati and at Washington, a momentous decision, reprimanding the labor board in terms far more severe than had been issued before and from judges who were friendly to labor's rights, did not actually get comprehensive coverage by the press associations of the United States or conspicuous attention from the newspapers at Cincinnati where the opinion was handed down.

The evidence derived from Mr. Phillips' testimony that members of the Newspaper Guild were in close touch with him and that he claimed they helped him "kill" stories has already been challenged as to accuracy by the members of the Cincinnati chapter of the Newspaper Guild, who naturally resent any inference that they would permit their CIO affiliations or trade union status to color by omission or otherwise the news reports of the American press.

Man Hurt as Machine Hits Ditch; Two Cars Crash on County Road

John Santkuy, 47, 619 N. Morrison street, received cuts on his face and right wrist when his car went into a ditch at the intersection of N. Division and W. Atlantic streets early today, police reported. Santkuy, driving north on N. Division, attempted to turn east on Atlantic street when his car slid into the ditch.

Cars driven by Milton Schwandt, 24, 1202 N. Oneida street, and Martin Jarckow, 42, route 2, Appleton, sideswiped on County Trunk A four miles north of Appleton between 12:30 and 1 o'clock this morning county highway police reported.

Jarckow was driving north and Schwandt south at the time of the collision, according to the report. Mrs. Jarckow and her two children, Beverly Jean, 24, and Betty Jane, 10, were shaken up but not injured. The Jarckow car was wrecked, police said, and the front end of the Schwandt machine damaged.

D. C. Stephenson Stymied in Fight To Leave Prison

Returned to Cell After Three Months' Battle
For Freedom

Michigan City, Ind.—(AP)—Stymied until next year, once-powerful D. C. Stephenson was back in state prison here today after a three-month court battle in renewal of his "never-say-die" fight to escape serving out his life behind bars.

The former Indiana grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan was brought here last night from jail in Noblesville, where he had stayed since Sept. 25 while lawyers in Hamilton circuit court wrangled over his murder conviction of 15 years ago.

Stephenson was found guilty Nov. 14, 1923, in the death of Madge Oberholtzer, 29, Indianapolis state-house worker, seven months before. Testimony was presented that he raped her and refused her medical attention after she took poison.

Stephenson never has given up his claim of innocence. Twelve times he has instituted court proceedings aimed at freedom, and failed on 11 occasions.

In his latest effort, he lost on two out of three moves. Judge Cassius M. Gentry overruled his written demand for trial Oct. 17 and Monday dismissed his petition for a writ of habeas corpus, aimed at outright freedom.

Has Two Chances
But he still has two cards to play. A petition for a writ of error coram nobis—a move for a new trial—was left over for next April's circuit court term in Noblesville. And he plans an appeal to state supreme court from Judge Gentry's ruling last Monday.

Stephenson is now gray-haired and going on 49, his repeated setbacks haven't quelled his optimism. Before leaving Noblesville, he said, "I feel that I am not guilty and that in the end everything will be all right."

Then, pausing at the prison gates, he shouted to newspaper reporters, "I wish everybody a merry Christmas."

Stephenson expected to be given his old job as clerk in a cell block. He was taken to Noblesville for a hearing on the petition for a writ of error. This contends his trial was unfair because Klan threats against his life kept him from testifying in his own defense. A supplemental petition holds that a purported deathbed statement of Miss Oberholtzer used in his trial was forged.

The demand for trial set out that Stephenson was convicted illegally because the jury found him guilty of second-degree murder on an indictment count of first-degree murder.

Union Is Opposed to Transfer of U. S. Ships

Buffalo, N. Y.—(AP)—A resolution, adopted by the Great Lakes conference of the National Maritime Union, CIO, is on its way to President Roosevelt, asking that he prevent the transfer of United States ships to foreign flags as a neutrality measure.

The conference, which passed resolutions before adjournment last night, said such a policy would be "aimed at maritime labor" and "a waste of taxpayers' money."

Detroit was selected for the next meeting, possibly in March 1941.

Majority of Louisiana Folks Still Think Huey Long Was a Good Influence in His State

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following exclusive story is the second in a series of reports on public opinion in Louisiana, where the political organization of the late Huey Long faces an important test of strength in a primary next month.

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion
Princeton, N. J.—Although many voters polled in Louisiana by the American Institute of Public Opinion are critical of the administration and tactics of Governor Earl Long, a majority continue to revere the memory of his famed brother, Huey P. Long, and feel that, on the whole, the colorful Kingfish who died at the hands of an assassin four years ago was a good influence in Louisiana.

The Huey Long political organization, under fire from many quarters in the state, faces an important test of strength in the primary election next month. To sound the sentiment of Louisiana voters on the political situation today the Institute has conducted an intensive canvass throughout the state on five major issues. The vote on three of these issues—whether the people of the state think elections in Louisiana are honest, whether they believe the state courts are honest, and whether they think Governor Earl Long will "clean house" if re-elected—was reported three days ago.

Today's report in the series of Institute studies on Louisiana covers the following issue:

"Taking everything into consideration, do you think that Huey P. Long was a bad or a good influence in Louisiana?"

A total of 2,500 voters in the state were questioned. The vote of those with opinions was:

Good Influence	Per Cent
Good Influence	60
Bad Influence	24
Both Good and Bad	16

Only a small proportion of those interviewed—fewer than one in ten, or 9 per cent, said they had no opinion.

The Institute's report of three days ago showed that the great majority of Louisiana voters—60 per cent of those polled—think elections in recent years have not been honestly conducted in their state. A majority also said they think the present Long regime will not "clean house." Many likewise felt that the state courts are not honest.

Those voters in the survey who feel that Huey Long was a good influence laud in particular his public works and education programs. The most frequent comments were:

"He gave us schools and free school books."
"He built good roads."
"He built new bridges."
"He helped the poor in every way."

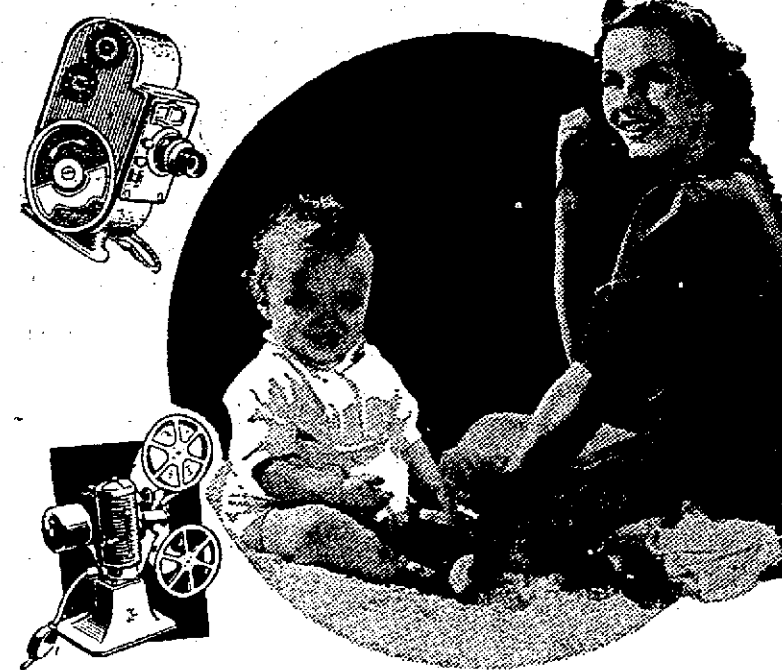

Many others offered the general comment that Huey Long "did more for Louisiana than anyone else has ever done."

The principal reasons given by those who think Huey Long was a bad influence are "his methods were dishonest," "he built a bad political machine," "he was a dictator," "he was a racketeer," and "he didn't keep his promises."

Appleton Streets How They Were Named

This is one of a number of brief articles telling how certain Appleton streets received their names. Much of the information in these articles comes from a survey made by Miss Anna L. Tenney, 724 E. Alton street.

Bateman street—From E. North street to Hancock street, four blocks east of Oneida street.

Named for Robert S. Bateman, the son of Robert R. Bateman, one of the earliest residents of Appleton, who died in 1880.

Bates street—From Chicago and North Western railroad tracks northwest to Pacific street.

Named for Charles Bates, who lived on the street in the early days of Appleton. Bates was 90 years old and living at Rhineland in 1932.

Bellaire court—From the end of Tonka street north.

Named for the park laid out by Joseph Harriman. Bellaire court is a French word meaning "fine air," and on old maps was said to be an Indian word meaning "place of beautiful birds."

Card Party Is Given At Shiocton Dwelling

Shiocton—Mrs. Tums Booth entertained a group of friends at cards at her home. Honors at schafskopf were awarded to Miss Erma Gunderson and the consolation to Mrs. Leonard Heinz.

Guests included Mrs. Harland Laird, Mrs. Ed Eick, Mrs. Leonard Heinz, Mrs. Harley Schwandt, Mrs. Milan Ratsch, Mrs. Harley Booth, Mrs. Glen O'Brien, Mrs. John Krabben, Mrs. Will Ross, Mrs. Fred Braatz, Mrs. Ervin Colwitz, and Miss Erma Gunderson. A lunch was served.

Members of the Rebekah lodge will conduct their second meeting of the month at the Odd Fellows hall Thursday evening. A Christmas party will be given and gifts will be exchanged.

Mrs. S. R. DeLong returned from Chicago where she spent the last three months helping care for her mother, Mrs. Anna Harter, 81, who was confined to her home during that time with a fractured pelvis. She reports her mother as being able to be about her home at present.

fluence was found in the lower income levels. More than 70 per cent in this group said he was a good influence, as compared to only 36 per cent in the upper income group.

A question of importance as the Louisiana election approaches is whether the popularity and prestige of the dead Huey Long will be transferred to his brother and successor. Can Earl Long keep the voters in line as successfully as the Kingfish did?

To test Earl Long's popularity as of this time the Institute questioned voters throughout the state on their choice among the five candidates who are running in the primary to be held January 16.

Those voters in the survey who feel that Huey Long was a good influence laud in particular his public works and education programs. The most frequent comments were:

"He gave us schools and free school books."
"He built good roads."
"He built new bridges."

The largest proportion of voters believing Huey Long was a good influence was found in the lower income levels. More than 70 per cent in this group said he was a good influence, as compared to only 36 per cent in the upper income group.

A question of importance as the Louisiana election approaches is whether the popularity and prestige of the dead Huey Long will be transferred to his brother and successor. Can Earl Long keep the voters in line as successfully as the Kingfish did?

To test Earl Long's popularity as of this time the Institute questioned voters throughout the state on their choice among the five candidates who are running in the primary to be held January 16.

Those voters in the survey who feel that Huey Long was a good influence laud in particular his public works and education programs. The most frequent comments were:

"He gave us schools and free school books."
"He built good roads."
"He built new bridges."
"He helped the poor in every way."

Many others offered the general comment that Huey Long "did more for Louisiana than anyone else has ever done."

The principal reasons given by those who think Huey Long was a bad influence are "his methods were dishonest," "he built a bad political machine," "he was a dictator," "he was a racketeer," and "he didn't keep his promises."

Hamilton Likely To Lose Position As Committeeman

Few Expect G. O. P. Chairman to be Renamed As Kansas Representative

BY W. B. RAGSDALE
Washington—(AP)—Chairman John D. Hamilton is likely to sever his connection with the Republican national committee when the party's convention meets next summer. None of the men who have control of the party organization in Kansas expects him to be reelected as the Sunflower state's committeeman.

Kansas Republicans, imbued with the brand of liberalism of which William Allen White is an exponent, have felt for some time that Hamilton's eastern friendships tended to pull him out of line with the views of the Sunflower state.

Since he has been national chairman, Hamilton has severed most of his Kansas connections. This gradual breaking of old ties will prove one of the big factors in his removal as committeeman from Kansas.

Natural Procedure
It is the natural procedure for the incoming presidential nominee to choose his own man to direct the campaign.

When Alf M. Landon was nominated in 1936, he chose Hamilton to direct his campaign, although Hamilton represented an opposing wing of the party in Kansas. Hamilton had succeeded David Mulvane as the state's committee member.

The Mulvane wing had often been called conservative. Hamilton, came into Kansas politics from this group. His selection by Landon as national chairman was an effort to weld Kansas Republicans into a unit.

Now the old school of Kansas Republicans, as represented by Mulvane and Hamilton, is out of the saddle. Their place has been taken by a younger group of men like Payne Rainer, the governor, and Walter Fees, the state chairman, both of them imbued with ideas that sound strangely foreign to some of the old Republican philosophies.

State Urges Extra Care So Accidents Won't Mar Holidays

Madison—(AP)—To assure a Merry Christmas in all Wisconsin homes, the industrial commission today urged extra precaution against recklessness or carelessness during the holiday season.

"In Wisconsin scores of men, women and children are seriously injured during the holiday season," it said. "Many of us are not really concerned with this problem until some one in our family circle, some one dear to us, happens to be the victim of recklessness or carelessness."

"Somewhere in the United States a fire is breaking out every minute and about two thirds of the fires occur in homes. At Christmas time extra hazards cause fires and catastrophes in many of our American homes, transforming a Merry Christmas into a time for mourning and bitter regrets."

Christmas tree fires, home, industrial and highway accidents have no place in holiday arrangements, the commission said.

with a 1938 estimate of $7,627,000,000.

This year's cash income was supplemented, the bureau said, by government benefit payments of $675,000,000 to farmers who cooperated with the federal crop control programs. Similar payments last year were given as $482,000,000.

The bureau said this year's cash income would average about $1,100 a farm, or about $238 a person on farms compared with $717 and $151, respectively, in 1932.

THE PROSECUTOR'S TURN

As Mr. Dewey continues on the stump his style of attack is bound to bring disorder to the recently fattened, smug and satisfied New Deal forces.

For the New Yorker is direct where the New Dealers are usually suave; he is factual where they are dripping with cloying sweetness; he is apparently truthful where they, in their financial policies, are counterfeit.

Mr. Dewey lambasted recently at the worm eaten balcony called Purchasing Power with which New Dealers have tried to sustain every irresponsible financial transaction they supported. The New Yorker said:

"If the government borrows a dollar from the banks and gives it to you, purchasing power is temporarily increased. But all that has really happened is that government on a grand scale has financed a kind of installment buying power which will ultimately have to be paid for out of actual income. It means in the long run a reduction of future purchasing power."

"But if the manufacturer, the transporter, the jobber, the retailer of a given product become able without wage reductions to sell that product to me for $8 instead of $10, they have given me a really new dollar. They have given me a dollar that means real purchasing power. A dollar that I can spend to create new employment."

"Then the workers in the plants that make that product, and the farmers that buy that product, and every other element in our society have available increased purchasing power, and that is real purchasing power. It is not purchasing power that has been taken from Peter and given to Paul."

"That means more markets, more production, more jobs."

To the rather piteous moanings of the New Deal today—"What can we do about it?"—in relation to their inability to live within the national income, it can be said that had they been truthful men and lived up to their words the national fever would have been cured long ago.

It wasn't that we were in anything new or strange by finding a depression upon us. But their methods have strung that depression out three times as long as any depression in our 164 years of history.

They can keep turning on this counterfeit purchasing power all they please and the more they turn it on the less it will be worth. Since few of them have any knowledge of that difficult thing in life known as earning a living they will never appreciate the difference between the real and the sham purchasing power.

Mr. Dewey is in his element because he believes he is on the trail of green goods men, flimflammers, who are fleeing before an arousing public opinion.

MORALE STILL COUNTS

As Sweden makes preparations either to go to the aid of Finland or to defend herself from the Russian monster, her people should find some encouragement in their past and the heroes who made it.

Charles XII was the greatest military strategist of his time. It was he who in turn defeated Frederick IV of Denmark; Augustus, elector of Saxony and king of Poland; and Peter the Great, routing 40,000 Russians with 10,000 Swedes. When Charles XII came to the throne in 1697 when only a boy of 15, Sweden was the most powerful nation in northern Europe and he proved to be its greatest fighter.

"Before him was the beloved Gustavus Adolphus who fought his first campaign at the age of 16 and who found three wars on his hands when he acceded to the throne. First he signed a truce with Denmark, an armistice with Poland and then defeated the Russians. He proved as able in statecraft as on the battlefield and with his astute chancellor, Axel Oxenstiern, placated warring nobles, wrote a constitution, built schools and made Sweden wealthy with a new economic policy."

Finland, too, has its heroes and traditions, as do Denmark and Norway. The Scandinavian peoples are proud of their history.

No one will deny that tradition and individual courage play a much smaller part in modern fighting than in the wars of the past in which personal combat was more common than now; or that tanks, planes, long-range guns and mechanized equipment have made war a cruel impersonality. Nor will the importance of numbers be discounted, especially in an attack by a nation of 180,000,000 upon a nation of 40,000,000.

But tradition and individual courage still help make morale. So do decent causes, among which are love of liberty and a will to save one's homeland from a lustful invader.

These may not stem Stalin's hordes but they will help to delay them—as they have already.

THE PURCHASING POWER OF THE GRAF SPEE

Newspaper accounts say the Graf Spee cost the German people about $19,000,000. It was built according to the prescription: We will take guns instead of butter.

This Goering slogan was actual because Germany sold much of her butter in order to buy abroad some of the essentials she needed in creating armed weapons.

But the question occurs in connection with our own economic life, and fallacies, why the construction of the Graf Spee wasn't a great thing for the German people, greater in fact than anything except its destruction, which in turn should be a blessing in that it will require another construction.

Germany borrowed money on forced loans from her people to pay the men who mined the coal and iron ore, and ran the blast furnaces and riveting machines that put this formidable battleship together.

But wasn't that the creation of Purchasing Power?

Didn't those men with their jobs create prosperity by spending their income for the necessities of life, and, perhaps some of its luxuries? Surely those of a certain faith in America cannot deny that the building of the Graf Spee was a wonderful thing for the German people and its destruction also a stroke of luck for them. Now, in theory, at least, Germany can borrow more money from its people, dig out more coal and iron, run more blast furnaces and riveting machines and build another Graf Spee, and thus create still more of that marvelous remedy for all human ills known as Purchasing Power.

And after she collapses from this process of bleeding her white throats who are responsible will say alas, they hadn't figured that a counterfeit Purchasing Power was any different than a genuine one, and they hadn't known that wrenching a handful of Reichmarks from one man to give to another to create an unnecessary thing did not actually affect purchasing power at all.

CLEANING UP AT WAUKESHA

Herman R. Salen, for years the trusted prosecutor at Waukesha, and for whom a splendid career was expected because he had developed into a first-class trial lawyer, has permanently surrendered his license to practice law. The surrender was part of his agreement to avoid another trial for perjury, the jury having disagreed in the first trial.

Mr. Salen dragged down with him in the mire another young lawyer by the name of Evans who had been raised to the high judicial rank of municipal judge and forgot that he had in his hands a sacred trust. Instead he construed his power as a privilege to abuse the laws and usages of the state to his own enrichment.

The Salen case might have been considered apart as merely an instance of a man who lost himself but Wisconsin felt a strange and benumbing shame to find a young man whom it had exalted into high and responsible position turn to bite the hand that pushed him into security.

It can be said for our state, however, that as soon as credible evidence became public of this malfeasance in the judiciary the really responsible officers of the law, including the circuit judges who participated, moved in with a grim and deadly precision to effect an eradication of the gangrene if, upon full trial and hearing, that was the condition existing.

The judge has lost his position and justice moves on again upon the even tenor of its way.

WE DON'T EVEN ANSWER

America today is the pet peeve of Moscow.

Not long ago Mr. Molotov said that Cuba and the Philippines "have long been demanding freedom and independence from the United States and cannot get them." They have the facts of history so woefully perverted over there in Russia they have not yet learned that we never owned Cuba. If they would read back to 1898 and find that we actually freed the island from a tyrant and yet did not take her over for ourselves we are sure they will not believe their eyes. Certainly, according to their ideas there is no such thing as decency in the world.

Neither does Moscow know that we are doing about our utmost to get rid of the Philippines as evidenced by an act of congress passed five years ago last spring which provides for their complete severance in 1945.

And we are sure that if the ruling Mongol caste in Russia was informed that the islands themselves are making the strongest sort of protests against being cut adrift they would say that it was just a capitalist falsehood.

Burly Russia cannot smooth over excepting with a dumb and thick-headed population her treatment of the little Baltic states as comparable to ours of Cuba and the Philippines.

The cases are simply not in the same class.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—A dear young lady who occasionally weeps on my shoulder writes: "I hate Christmas. I'll be glad when it is over."

I know what you mean, honey. We all hate Christmas—its crowds, its hypocrisy, its undisciplined spending and its stupid formula of a handkerchief for a handkerchief.

We hate the nuisance of putting up a Tree, of taking it down, and the mess of it. We hate the mountain of dishes someone must wash, and the turkey skeleton that mocks at us from the ice-box until the last bit of meat has been removed.

We hate spending long hours wrapping packages in fancy paper and gay ribbons, knowing they will be torn off with hardly a glance for our labor. We hate getting gifts from people we forgot to get gifts for.

Sure, honey, I know what you mean.

The trouble with you and me, Sugar, is that the clothes of Sophistication we wear don't fit us very well. We step along, nodding knowingly at streamlining, liberalism, modernism and the whole big-bang business of our day—and yet, deep down, we are confused and unhappy with it. We want simplicity.

We don't hate Christmas. Gee Whizz, nobody hates Christmas. Our trouble is that somewhere along the line our kind of Christmas got lost. It is difficult for us to understand just what happened. Christmas isn't a complicated idea. Funny how it could have gone astray. Christmas—well all there is to it is that a long time ago a Child was born in Bethlehem, and He was God's Son, come to save Men's Souls. Christians set aside Christmas as a day to rejoice that He was born. It is simple enough. Strange it should have wandered so far from the world's consciousness.

I always knew there wasn't any Santa Claus. My mother told me about him, but she never was emphatic on the subject. Her approach was like this: "Yes, they tell about Santa Claus and his reindeer and the chimney, but it is for you to decide how true it is. Maybe Santa Claus is just another name for Something or Someone."

She didn't have to tell me. I knew. Santa Claus was just a name for God.

Of course, they had to have a symbol, so they took a jolly, laughing, good-hearted fat man; put a red coat on him, gave him some reindeer and called him Santa Claus. Little children can't personalize Goodness or God, but they understand about a fat man with whiskers and a red suit and a pack on his back, especially the pack. Children, in case no Child Expert ever thought of it before, learn to say "Gimme" before they say "Mama."

There's a way, though, Sugar, for us to have our kind of Christmas. Let's forget all the hateful features. If I send you a "Merry Christmas" greeting card, you send me one. It means a few pennies for the postoffice, a few for the merchants, the sales folk—for lots of people. Let's think of it as just a holiday, like Valentine's Day. And let's smile at the confusion and bustle and bundle-carrying, and say: "These people must know what they're doing. They MUST! It's all in fun. It's gay. We can't make people remember what it's all about. Enough that it is a holiday. Enough that they are carrying gifts through the laughing streets—and not the bomb-broken bodies of babies down a war-worn trail of tears."

Hate Christmas, my dear? Of course not. Weep, yes. Weep for a mankind that shouts its "Merry Christmas" with bombs, that sends Season's Greetings from cannon of hate, a mankind whose mistletoe, a falling shell, invites the kiss of Death. Weep that the jolly toy-makers are no longer at their little shops in Nuremberg but are, instead, goose-stepping to a rendezvous with Eternity.

Weep, most of all, that Civilization—arrogant, cocky, braggart which can talk through the air and turn night into day at the touch of a button—is no nearer a cure for War than ever.

But hate Christmas? Never! Christmas, my dear, our kind of Christmas, is almost certainly the panacea for which Man has so futilely tumbled; for Christmas—really, truly Christmas—is the Nativity, not in a manger but in Man's heart.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING ON THE FARM

Around the kitchen table, with its checkered cloth cover,
A lighted kerosene lamp in the center, shedding cheer,
We sat on winter evenings, and we talked our shopping over;
For it was a December night with Christmas looming near.

The roads were banked with snowdrifts, and the hens had not been laying.
It was well-nigh impossible to drive the team to town;
So on the printed pages of a catalog went straying
Two pairs of twinkling blue eyes and two pairs of happy brown.

The catalog was thick and most profusely illustrated.
There was a section filled with toys and there we loved to look!
But Mother liked to see the furniture, and Father waited
To scan the pictures of the farm machines that spoiled the book.

At least we children thought so, for our minds were filled with scheming,
And nothing useful entered there! We marked the pages where
The toys were pictured, and the games; and then we fell to dreaming
Of Christmas and the happy rush of footsteps on the stair.

The clock struck nine, the book was closed, and sleepy children scattered
To dream of giant catalogs that whisked us far away
To the white home of Santa Claus, where little brown men chattered
Above the toys they fashioned for our happy Christmas Day!

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — Between Secretary Ickes and the electric utility members of the United States Chamber of Commerce is about 2,000,000 kilowatt hours of conflict over how much power the industrial section of the country needs for assured national defense.

That is why Secretary Ickes and the power industry generate a two-way electrical storm every time the subject comes up. It is up now.

To get at the thing, remember that about 18 months ago a National Defense Power Committee was formed under chairmanship of Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war. His responsibility, by law, is to see that the industrial machinery of the country is well ready for war.

He called the committee together to hear the views on whether there was enough power available in the U. S. "industrial quadrangle" to meet a heavy war demand. The quadrangle ranges from St. Louis and Chicago on the west to Birmingham, Ala., and Boston on the south and east.

Need More Power
Their view was that more power was needed. There was a difference of opinion as to how much, but after the meeting one of the members as spokesman put it at 1,000,000 kilowatts of immediate need. Perhaps nearly that much more would be needed at a later time. How would the money be raised? Part from the industry, and part from the RFC.

But after a few months of experience, some power men complained that Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, wanted as security about everything the power people had, plus their gold teeth. The expected substantial loans did not show up.

However, power company resources in the industrial triangle have seemed adequate. Orders for 1,200,000 kilowatts of steam turbine generation was placed by the industry during the past year, and their plans are to put in orders for 400,000 more. Together that would be about $500,000,000 of new power generators.

Meantime, the Defense Power Committee had been merged with one of Secretary Ickes' groups to form the National Power Policy Committee. It was largely dominated by Ickes and his power-minded ally, Benjamin Cohen. The committee ordered a survey of the power needs of the industrial quadrangle.

This survey has not been published but good sources indicate that the engineer who made it, Thomas R. Tate, put the needs at 3,500,000 kilowatts. The difference then, between the industry's estimate and the committee estimate is roughly 2,000,000 kilowatts.

Ickes' committee then set out to reconcile the differences. Conferences in Washington were scheduled from early December to Christmas time, with power company representatives from each of 13 regions within the quadrangle presenting their views and arguing their case against the findings of the Tate report. Fifty power companies will have appeared when the hearings end.

Meantime, the utility members of the Chamber of Commerce, including a large portion of the industry, made their own survey.

The chamber said it demonstrated that the industry was able to meet the country's needs without further intrusion of the Federal Government into the power business.

Within the Tate report was a three-way proposal for coordinating the country's power. One was to bring about short hook-ups between neighboring power companies to exchange power when the situation called for it. The second could handle. Power companies have been doing that for years. There was no disagreement on study of further possibilities in that direction. A second proposal was simply for more generating machinery. There was the expected controversy there.

But the next suggestion drew real fire. That the industry was able to dream of growing lands without further intrusion of the Federal Government into the power business.

A cold fact is, that during last winter the nation ran dangerously short of power. But who is to say whether 3,500,000 kilowatts are needed or would be a costly white elephant?

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

Both sides in the war seem to be claiming victories on a "boast to boast" hook-up just now. Germany says she shot down thirty-four out of forty-four British planes that attacked Wilhelmshaven without harming a hair of its head. England says she sank one Nazi cruiser and hit another. Well, it all sounds more like a war, anyhow.

Why the Nazi pocket battleship Graf Spee committed suicide instead of fighting it out in accordance with the best naval traditions continues to puzzle the world. She had secrets which Hitler didn't want the world to discover it is said. This would seem to indicate that Nazi Germany is worrying more over its secrets than the allies are.

The state committee is now in better shape, from the standpoint of a paid staff, a treasury, facilities and organization in the localities, than at any other time for years.

Yet the only time, as far as the public knows, that the party organization has had any contact with the head of the state administration was when party leaders quarreled with the chief executive over patronage distribution.

While its own prospects, for good or bad, in the next campaign depend almost completely on the administration's record in Moscow, the state committee centers its approach to the public in speeches about communism, the New Deal's taxation policies, and the defeated Progressive party, although it must be evident that the Heil regime needs just now, above all, some affirmative backing from the party it represents.

WHAT WAS THAT ABOUT THE WAR IN "EUROPE"?

Under the CAPTIVE DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — If Governor Julius Heil were given to musing over such matters, he might wonder whether the people of Wisconsin knew what they were voting for when they changed drivers in the capital at the last state election.

For Mr. Heil, sitting in the executive office furrowing his brows over the gigantic problem of balance the state budget and putting it to effect what thus far have been rather innocuous and nominal economies, might well have a philosophical question or two when he notes the reactions those policies have thus far brought. He may raise the question of whether the Wisconsin public, at least the vocal part of that public, actually and truly wants economy in state government.

In the last few weeks Heil has received far more brick-bats than compliments. Highway contractors have belabored him. Pension organizers have abused him. Politicians have ridiculed him. The organ of the Wisconsin Education association, spokesman for thousands of teachers who are presumably in a position to influence public opinion, has castigated him. The Wisconsin State Employees association, government workers' union, has made the charge, couched in language far from sweet-tempered, that his policies are unconstitutional and publicly yearned for a contest. His own board of agriculture, comprised of carefully picked men who are supposed to be loyal, balked last week at an order that the department of agriculture budget be cut.

Who would own it? It would not be valuable to any one power company but to a whole series of regions. Also because of the cost, the idea of government control sprang up and much of the fight now is on that front.

"Establishment of super grid systems as contemplated in government trunk lines," said the Chamber of Commerce, "is neither necessary nor practical."

A cold fact is, that during last winter the nation ran dangerously short of power. But who is to say whether 3,500,000 kilowatts are needed or would be a costly white elephant?

Everybody praises the economy ideal in the abstract. Everybody howls when economy actions strike near home.

What Governor Heil needs more than anything else just now is support from his party organization in putting his aims before the public. If only to counteract the insistent and powerful public opposition of some of the groups mentioned, and many others. But he isn't getting it. While he receives 10 scornful replies to one word of praise, the Republican organization maintains an expensive capital headquarters which busies itself mainly with such matters as mailing out reprints of national committee publicity, anti-New Deal propaganda, organizing delegate campaigns, and the ancient quarrel within the party over rival claims to leadership.

LACK OF ENERGY

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, N. D.
Noted Physician and Author

OBSTACLE TO PROPHYLAXIS
Dental practitioners have long used the term prophylaxis in a restricted sense, referring to the important feature in the preservation or conservation of the teeth, that is, periodic inspection, removal of stains or tartar deposits, scaling and polishing of the teeth to prevent decay or decay from getting a start in any minute fissure or crevice in the enamel, and also attention to the condition of the gums for the prevention of pyorrhea. All of which is absolutely indispensable if you want to keep your teeth—and who but a dimwit doesn't?—yet it is well to remember that prophylaxis has a wider meaning than that. It is the art of guarding against, preserving from or preventing disease. Anything that contributes to the prevention of disease is a prophylactic remedy, precaution or measure, for instance adding vitamin D to the regular diet to prevent rickets or keeping the skin between the toes dry to prevent ringworm (dermatophytosis, foot itch).

We explained the other day how nasal allergy impedes progress in the prevention of three-fourths of the illness physicians attend—respiratory infections. The increasing number of individuals who are allergic but do not understand the nature of their trouble and hence ascribe their reactions to fancied exposure to cold or wet tends to confuse the uninitiated and raise doubt in regard to the question of exposure to cold and wet.

I reckon that having explained as clearly as I can the nature of nasal allergy and the characteristic sudden beginning and cessation of the stuffiness, sneezing and watering at the nose a reaction which inevitably occurs not long after some real or imagined exposure to draft or change of temperature, there is nothing more I can do about it.

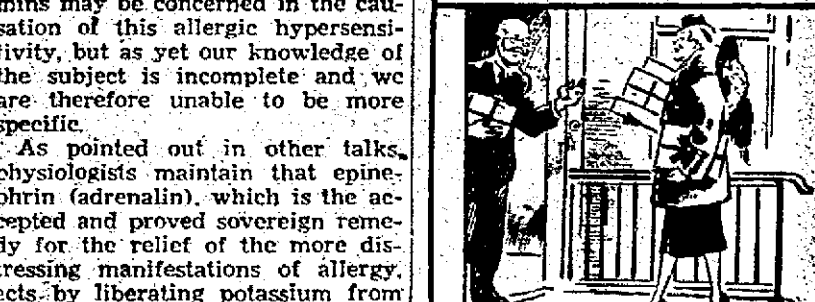

Altho I hope I may be wrong, it seems to be that the allergic state, tendency or hypersensitivity is steadily increasing in frequency among the general population. I hope this is only an apparent increase, due to the fact that the nature of the trouble is more generally recognized today, whereas formerly it passed as "cold" or "catarrh," or in case of allergic asthma as "nervousness" or "neurosis." But the conviction grows that there is an actual increase in prevalence of allergic sensitivity, irritability or weakness among the general population in this country due to deficiencies in our modern refined diet, especially shortage of calcium and vitamin D.

Insufficient daily intake of other mineral elements and other vitamins may be concerned in the causation of this allergic hypersensitivity, but as yet our knowledge of the subject is incomplete and we are therefore unable to be more specific.

As pointed out in other talks, physiologists maintain that epinephrin (adrenalin), which is the accepted and proved sovereign remedy for the relief of the more distressing manifestations of allergy, acts by liberating potassium from the tissues, and ceases to give relief or bad, in the next campaign depend almost completely on the administration's record in Moscow, the state committee centers its approach to the public in speeches about communism, the New Deal's taxation policies, and the defeated Progressive party, although it must be evident that the Heil regime needs just now, above all, some affirmative backing from the party it represents.

Today and Tomorrow

Mr. Dewey's Speeches

The Democratic party will do well not to underestimate Mr. Dewey. Although as yet he has made only two speeches on national affairs, they are the speeches of a young man who seems to have a considerable instinct for the essential and a noticeable inclination to lead his own party instead of following it. If, of course, that like in 1936, he will pressure of his party and end by toeing the party line. That remains to be seen. But at this moment he is still free. He has not yet thrown away his special advantage; that he is not personally committed to the defense of the Republican record from 1920 to 1932 and that he does not need to adopt as his own the hodgepodge of confused complaints which have made the Republican opposition to the New Deal so dreary and so ineffective.

Combined with his political magnetism and his political availability, this freedom from previous commitments makes Mr. Dewey a formidable candidate. For the country is not likely to develop much enthusiasm for a Republican party which offers no more than a return to the good old days of 1920-29; it will not have much appetite for a Republican party which seems to be unaware of the evils that the New Deal has tried to reform, and seems bent on destroying the reforms than on curing the evils. But it might develop enthusiasm for a candidate who had a coherent and positive philosophy which set him apart from the Republican aberrations of the 20's as well as from the New Deal aberrations of the 30's.

Dewey Could Purge, Rejuvenate His Party

In this respect Mr. Dewey's two speeches are promising. He has chosen a ground on which if he has the courage to proceed, he can attack the New Deal and also purge and rejuvenate his own party. A Republican candidate might conceivably be elected on a mere accumulation of discontent. But sniping is not a policy and complaints are not principles and the status quo ante is not a workable objective. The Republican party as it operates in Congress today is so confused and contradictory that it is quite unfit to govern the country, and is probably incapable even of conducting a campaign.

So the appearance of Mr. Dewey, who comes of a new generation of Republicans which includes Governors Stassen, Saltonstall, Vanderbilt, and perhaps also Senator Taft, should be welcome to all who feel the need for a healthy two-party system.

The thesis of Mr. Dewey's Minneapolis speech, that this is still a growing country which still requires development by private enterprise, was I believe, correctly chosen. For if this thesis is true, then the fundamental premise of the New Deal is wrong. Now it is indisputable, I think, that the New Deal has been more than unfriendly to business enterprise; that it has not been concerned merely with the abuses of private enterprise, and that it has been concerned, as Mr. Dewey pointed out, that the opportunity for private enterprise and the social usefulness of private enterprise are almost over.

This belief has caused the New Dealers to devise their necessary reforms and to administer them in the spirit of men who do not mind discouraging private initiative; and it has caused them to go in for spending, not merely to relieve distress, but as a substitute for private investment. That is why their needed reforms have been unnecessarily oppressive in practice and why their spending which was in large part imperative, has been so dangerously demoralizing. Because they have believed that the development of this country by private enterprise had reached its limit, they have looked upon private enterprise as a dying race and they have looked to bureaucratically managed collective spending as the hope of the future.

Industrial Production Greater Than In 1929

The event will show, I believe, that Mr. Dewey went to the heart of the matter when he challenged this, the major working premise of the New Deal. For we are now having a recovery, and we shall soon see, I imagine, that the reason why we cannot have a full recovery in the near future, why in the midst of good business we still have five million unemployed, is that for ten years the development of industry has been arrested.

Industrial production today is greater than it was in 1929. But there is still an army of unemployed. And the reason is that while the population has continued to grow during the ten years of depression, the expansion of industrial plants, the construction of machines, the making of tools, and the industrial training of young men, have not kept pace with the growth of population. There are some five million new workers for whom tools to work do not exist and in whom technological skill has not been developed. They are the present-day unemployed.

Thus we are finding, and shall soon be acutely aware of the fact, that the demand for goods is greater than our capacity to produce them. We shall find that at critical points in the economy, in steel, for example, in transportation, and in many other things, there is insufficient capacity and there are not enough skilled workers.

It will soon be demonstrated that our unemployment today, unlike that during the years immediately after 1929, is not due to over-expansion. It is due to under-development during the latter years of the depression. And since it takes considerable time to enlarge plants, to construct industrial machines, and to train experienced workers, we must expect for some time to see much unemployment in the midst of booming business.

So, unless the present recovery is suddenly halted by extraneous causes, the recovery itself will demonstrate that Mr. Dewey is right in saying that the country still needs to be developed by private enterprise and that the New Dealers have been wrong when they denied it.

Does Dewey See What Is Wrong With Farlies?

But this is the easiest part of Mr. Dewey's task. For the country will remember that the New Deal came into power in a landslide of reaction against twelve years of Republican rule. What he has still to demonstrate in his subsequent speeches is whether he sees as clearly what was wrong with the Republicanism of the 20's as he sees what is wrong with the New Deal of the 30's.

Thus far he has thrown out only a hint. He has suggested that in the halcyon days which preceded the New Deal the country "ate too many green apples" and "got a bad dose of colic." Mr. Dewey will have to do better than that, I think, if he is going to convince the discerning that he can diagnose the problem as accurately as he has criticized the New Deal's various attempts to solve it. For the question every Republican must answer, if he is to be taken seriously, is why after twelve years of undisputed power the country and the world found themselves in such distress and such disorder that the fallacies of the New Deal seemed attractive.

It will be Mr. Dewey's task to explain whether the foreign policy of Harding, the tariff policy from Harding to Hoover, the Republican industrial policy in respect to mergers and combinations to "stabilize" prices, the credit policy which promoted the speculative boom, were or were not important causes of the economic and social disaster in which the New Deal was produced. If Republican policies were not the causes, then he must tell us what were the causes. And if Republican policies were the causes, principal or contributing, then he must tell us whether his party today is prepared to alter the principles it acted on when it was in power.

So what Mr. Dewey has to say about the Republican 20's will be the acid test of how much faith is to be put in what he has said so well about the New Deal 30's. For it will show whether he is the leader of a renovated party or merely a plausible and attractive opposition candidate.

Delay Conference on Reciprocal Trucking

Madison — (AP) — Commissioner George W. Rickman of the Wisconsin motor vehicle department said Tuesday a conference with Michigan officials on reciprocal trucking privileges had been postponed for at least a week.

Officials of the two states had planned to meet in Chicago tomorrow, but the arrangements were cancelled. Rickman said Lee Richardson, director of the Michigan motor vehicle department, agreed to hold the meeting in Chicago next week, and possibly later.

The authorities declared a truce after out-of-state truckers had been stopped at the boarders and compelled to buy both Wisconsin and Michigan licenses.

Deal With Others as You Would Like to be Dealt With

BY DOROTHY DIX

If you are in doubt as to what to say or do in any circumstances, the infallible rule is to try it out on yourself and see how you react to it. If the result makes you belling mad it is a warning to change your tactics. But if, on the contrary, it leaves you feeling like the cat that swallowed the canary it is a signal that it is safe to use it on others.

Dorothy Dix

This simple method of dealing with our fellow creatures would enable husbands and wives to stay married, children to be able to endure their parents and friends to remain on speaking terms, because not many of us are intentionally cruel and unkind. We are just dumb and possessed of the delusion that other people don't feel about things the way we do and are not irritated by the things that rule us.

Suppose, for instance, you were a child. How would you like it if you were dragged from your play into the living room and forced to make the rounds and kiss a lot of doddering old relatives with mouths full of false teeth? How would you like to gorge yourself on spinach when your mouth was watering for roast beef and potatoes? How would you like to have to get up with your knees shaking so you could barely stand and recite or sing for visitors? How would you like to have your features taken apart and one old aunt said when a party it was you had the Jones' nose and another one surmised that you were going to be runty like the Smiths? How would you like it if Mamma and Papa made you the subject of their funny stories that set dinner parties in a roar? And how, oh, how would you like it if everybody asked if you were a good boy or girl?

If you had married a girl who had led you to believe that she considered you the ultimate in human perfection, how would you like her to turn into a little critic on the hearth as soon as you got her home and begin chirping to you about all your faults and imperfections? How would you like her to criticize your clothes and your table manners and the way you sat down and rose up?

How would you like her to be a back-seat driver who spoils every drive in the automobile by telling you that you are going too fast or too slow or to watch out for the street lights and not run over the old woman who is coming down the road? How would you like a wife who always belittled you and compared you unfavorably with other men and who threw cold water on all of your plans?

If you were a husband who worked hard to keep your wife soft and easy, how would you like it if she took everything you did for her for granted and never so much as said "Thank you" for all the sacrifices that you made for her? How would you like it if she never gave any sign of affection for you and if her kisses were as cold as icicles on your cheek?

How would you like it if she was always telling you about some handsome and fascinating man she had met and how beautifully he was dressed? How would you like it if she ate part of her every evening as soon as dinner was over and went out to some place of amusement, leaving you to spend the evening alone, with nothing more diverting to do than to watch the baby breathe?

If you were a wife, how would you like to have a husband who never spoke to you except to criticize you and who never noticed what you had on, or how you looked, or appreciated how hard you worked to make him comfortable? How would you like to have a husband who nagged you about what you ate, and what you wore, and where you went until you had no liberty in life?

How would you like to have a husband who whined and complained and thought he was a martyr because he had to work to support his family and stay at home with the children? How would you like to have a husband who kept you in a state of extravagance? How would you like to have a husband who was so busy and interested in his clubs he had no time to give to his home?

If you were a mother-in-law, how would you like to have a daughter-in-law who didn't even try to separate with you from you and who thought she had a right to run your house and regulate your life?

And if you were a daughter-in-law, how would you like to have a mother-in-law who gave you the cold shoulder and didn't attempt to understand you or sympathize with you or help you?

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Every woman should have a complete manicuring set. This is thoroughly equipped and comes beautifully cased.

Quite naturally I am concerned about your beauty—everyone's beauty, so if I were going to give you a Christmas gift it would be some aid or aids, which would tend to correct an existing beauty problem.

We think first of skin and hair, when we think of beauty, even though we should think of figure first! So cosmetics for care of face and scalp made admirable Christmas gifts.

In selecting this you should acquaint yourself with the skin and scalp condition of your friend. Most of the good cosmetics are mixed to serve the dry, oily, normal and young conditions. The essentials for the face are cleansing creams, skin lotion, a foundation formula or lubricating cream. These come in smaller quantities, attractively assembled and boxed, and usually include a hand lotion and face powder. Such a gift is a nice gift thought for any age girl or woman.

I would, and do, give hair brushes! Good hairbrushes which have unadorned wooden backs but excellent bristles. I give these to the children, girls, women and men on my list, for I think a good hairbrush is one of all nicest gifts.

Then, of course, when I want a gift to "show" more than serve, I look at the perfumes, the colognes, and the exquisite make-up compacts. I might even drift over to the counter of fitted evening bags if my budget will stand them! These are always dear to women and it seems as if you never quite get enough of them.

Quantities of face tissues and fluffy powder puffs make a most unusual presentation and a welcome one, as does one of those new little silk bags which contain lipstick and nail polish which match in color.

Compacts range in price from a half dollar to twenty-five and even the least expensive ones are pretty. This season I fell in love with a new beauty of the luxury class—a rich burgundy one of French enamel, slim and round, which boasts a crest of brilliant. Designed for royal taste, to be sure, but a compact you would most likely keep to pass on to the next generation!

For just a cunning remembrance I stocked up on tiny quantities of good perfume which came all dressed up in Christmas garb. One looked like a carefree angel, another filled a red boot of Santa's, three candles each with a different fragrance tempted me, and so did a small wicker hamper chuck full of perfume and makeup aids. These little nick-nacks are just enough to say "Merry Christmas" in an original way and they are so well presented they cannot help but please.

If I could afford to, I would send sweet-smelling sachets instead of Christmas cards to all my woman friends. It would be a fragrant way of wishing!

Likewise, perfume baths myself, naturally I believe most other women do too, and bath aids at this season are so exquisitely packaged that it is too difficult for me to select two or three to tell you about. See them yourself and save a lot of precious time by sending them to any woman you should and have not as yet remembered! She will be delighted—I can vouch for that.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

If you want to see the peculiar symptoms which love frustration can produce, just read about Olive's troubles today. She presents a fusion of two classical entities in the field of psychology. Her lump in the throat is a sign of love frustration, but her fear of insanity is a guilt reaction. Be sure to paste this Case Record in your scrapbook.

CASE P-133: Olive F., aged 29, is an office secretary. "But she is so nervous and hysterical she can hardly do her work," Olive's sister told me over the telephone.

"She is terribly afraid of insanity, and cries half the night. Besides, she has a lump in her throat many times during the day, and feels as if she is going to start crying right before the people in her office."

"Last week she read about epilepsy in the medical column, and ever since then she has been worried lest she may be developing epilepsy."

"Dr. Crane, something has to be done soon, for she is going to have next birthday, are often stampeded into this "29 panic."

They begin to feel so sorry for themselves. They think old age is upon them, and feel weepy to think of all the romance and happiness which has passed them by.

Like the typical wife at the menopause, they develop all sorts of hysterical symptoms based on this false belief that they are "on the shelf," and no longer desirable love objects.

A well-adjusted married woman of 35 or 40 may think it is amusing to find a 20-year-old girl worried about old age, but it is no joke to the victim.

The 29 Panic. When people complain of having a frequent lump in their throat, it usually indicates a fear of emotional bankruptcy. They have suffered an actual or imagined loss.

A happily married wife may have lost her husband by death, which is sufficient reason for her to cite the sobby lump-in-the-throat mood. Again, a girl who has never had a husband, may feel that she now has lost her chance of ever enjoying marriage and a happy home, simply because of her belief a girl of 30 is old and unattractive.

Sometimes a physical defect may give rise to this mood long before the age of 29 or 30. If she has suffered some disfiguring injury, as in an automobile accident, or has suffered the partial amputation of a breast, or a hysterectomy (without amputation), she may show all the hysterical symptoms which Olive now suffers.

People seldom if ever have a lump in the throat from financial reverses. They may temporarily be crestfallen or cry "bawl their

Count Cards To Improve One's Ability

BY ELY CULBERTSON

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: The other afternoon I sat southeast, where I could point out South's and East's errors, when the following hand came up. The players were exuberant college boys, and their bidding was likewise:

"South, dealer.
"Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST

"South bid a diamond, North said two diamonds, and South said five. Their opponents, strangely, passed. West led a diamond, East won and returned another. Dummy won the second round. Declarer finessed a heart, then played out his other three hearts, discarding a spade from dummy. East, showing a little foresight, signaled with his spade eight on the fourth heart trick. Declarer led a spade to dummy's queen. West ignored his partner's signal and won with the ace. From his puzzled expression it was evident he had neglected to perform a simple duty which all players must perform if they want to play well: he'd neglected to count South's cards. He led his club ace in exasperation and declarer was in." He trumped the ace, trumped a spade in dummy, and discarded his last spade on the club king.

"There are all too many players who think the counting process is a magic formula used only by wizards, when actually it is so simple. West should have counted diamonds like this: two rounds (eight) plus one in dummy leaves no more than four still held by declarer. Four, plus the six rounds played, plus one spade, leaves two cards of declarer's not accounted for. Hearts are all out. If the two are clubs, West is sure to win a club trick, even if he leads a spade and discards. If declarer holds a club and a spade, a spade lead still will not lose. If declarer holds two spades... see above.

K. S. Chicago."

My correspondent seems to have cleaned up his point nicely. It is indisputably true that "counting" plays far too small a part in the average player's technique. The above hand offers a striking illustration of this. Many readers probably will feel that West's real error was in putting up the spade ace, when East's previous spade signal had announced ability to take dummy's queen. This, however, was entirely unimportant. It was perfectly all right (correct, indeed) for West to dash up with the spade ace, but it was inexcusable for him to hang down the club ace. Actually there was no need for West to count declarer's distribution. All West had to know was that his own side had already taken two tricks... and that if declarer had a club in his hand he couldn't eat it!

eyes out" for a few hours, but they readjust.

No Financial Menopause. Although the chances for a man or woman past 40 to get a job, are not as rosy as at the age of 25, we do not have a financial menopause. People are buoyed up by chronic belief that they can make money if given a chance, regardless of their age.

But when it comes to a matter of love, they develop all sorts of neurotic forms of behavior, simply because they think that love is "dated," so to speak, like modern coffee, and that after 45 years of age they simply cannot partake of love, even if it is offered to them.

Olive actually has this delusion regarding herself at the age of not quite 30. But her fear of insanity is another symptom showing a different problem.

She thinks she has violated a divine injunction and thus is fearing insanity as God's punishment for her sin. She has been auto erotic. Send for my bulletin on "SEX PROBLEMS OF YOUNG PEOPLE." It cured her fear of insanity.

She did not speak for a long minute. "Thank you, Michael," she said at last, very quietly but her hands were locked tightly together. Michael went back to "Is there more tea?" he asked in his natural tone.

Tuck poured a cup with shaking hands. Michael bent swiftly and kissed her as he took his cup. She bit her lip to keep the tears back. Bunny turned round. Her voice was firm and controlled. "There is something I am sure I had better tell you," she said. "I promised Duncan I would say nothing, but now I feel that that promise can be broken."

Michael waited.

"The other evening," she went on almost immediately, "I went for a walk with Duncan. It was just at dusk—and Tuck went for a drive perhaps you remember. We

Children's Interests Should Have Parental Encouragement

BY ANGELO PATRI

You remember Christ's story about the men who were each given his allowance of fortune. One took his and used it over and over until it increased itself many times. One was so careful of his that he wrapped it in a napkin and buried it in the earth. When he dug it up again it was exactly what it had been in the beginning, nothing added, no joyous growth, nothing done for anybody, including its owner.

We keep doing that over and over where children are concerned. We see that they have a knack, a certain feeling for something useful in their day's work or play, but we give no heed to it. We let the gift lie in its napkin until it is forgotten.

Sometimes the gift is powerful enough to insist upon being recognized and used. It makes a personality of its owner, a power of itself and changes life for the better for many people beside its owner. Everybody then is eager to claim responsibility for the genius. Nobody can be found to take blame for the failure of those others whose gifts, being in embryo, can be silenced.

Strength comes of use. The gift that is used grows and its owner grows with it. Let the child who can do a little, do it. By doing that little he adds power to himself and strength to his gift. It may happen that a slight gift, well used, overpowers another's great gift slightly used.

There is a phase of this idea generally overlooked by parents and teachers. It is a highly important matter and one that everybody concerned with or about children should make careful and watchful use of in daily practice. A skill appears, the child is delighted to practice it. Then his interest fades and he takes up another form of activity. That is the time to be watchful. Encourage this new activity. Don't scold because he was interested in that other one yesterday, and now wants to leave it. He probably has exhausted that vein of power and is turning the power he gained from exercising it toward this new phase of growth.

No effort is lost. The power the child gained through his experience with the first idea changes form and adds power to the next stage of work. One phase merges into the next without loss provided that the child keeps actively at work constructively busy. Changing interests are normal in the healthy child. It is easy to tell the child who is sincerely working from the one who is busying himself without purpose. Their attitudes make their condition clear to the teachers and parents. The purposeful child keeps actively growing, his interests advancing, his skills increasing. The other child accomplishes nothing, has no purpose beyond activity, and indicates a need for direction and close supervision—educational and medical.

Teach children to find work, to work purposefully, and you will have little to fear from them thereafter.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

The Creeping Man

by Frances Shelley Wees

Yesterday, Murchison told Duncan he was going away, and would leave the diamonds for him. Michael gives Duncan the gray box containing the pebbles and love letters—nothing more. Tuck accuses Michael of being beastly to Duncan.

Chapter 33
The Creeping Man

"DUNCAN couldn't possibly be guilty of anything very bad," Tuck went on. "You can see that in his face, Michael. He's got an awfully nice, clean look."

"Soap," Michael muttered, but subsided hastily. Finally he came to a stop. He leaned against the wall. "All right, I'll talk sense," he said. "Real sense. But I'll say this—the 'Real sense' I've ever saw, who had committed unpeppably rotten crimes, had a face like an angel."

"Duncan doesn't look like an angel," Tuck cried. "He looks like a man."

Michael disregarded her. He talked straight at Bunny. "This isn't a romance we're living in, Bunny. It may not even come all right in the end, the way romances do. I want you to understand that, if it were a romance, we should be just right—knowing in our inmost hearts that the hero can really do no wrong, and is in all probability suffering for another's crime, suffering in silence. Later on, of course, it would all be cleared up. I'm not so sure that this will come out that way."

"Probably. I'm just stating facts, that's all," he paused. "Really now, Duncan's little story explained a lot of things very nicely, didn't it? About the reasons for his brother's disappearance. But why didn't he tell it to the Commissioner long ago? As far as that goes, why did the wife, knowing that her husband was deserting her, go to the police at all? If Miss Lissey was right," he said quietly, "Duncan was far more anxious to get those letters this afternoon than he was the diamonds. However," he said grimly, "he didn't get them all. We kept one to identify the handwriting by—when the time comes."

"Michael—why should he want the letters?" Tuck asked.

He did not answer. He was looking at Bunny. She stood with lifted chin staring out into the wood.

"Bunny," he said after a moment. "I want to ask you a favor. It is for your own good. I want to ask you not to see Duncan or have anything to do with him again until this matter is cleared up. Will you promise that?"

She considered. "No, I don't think I will," Michael said after a moment. "I am sure he is innocent. Why should I treat him like a criminal?"

"Do you believe me to be a truthful person, Bunny?"

"Yes."

"Do you think I would make accusation against anyone if I were not absolutely sure of my ground?"

"No, Michael."

"Then, I will say this. Remember, I have chosen my words. I know exactly what I'm saying. Bunny—I told you all I know about this case, all I am absolutely sure of. I would not dream of speaking to Duncan, Murchison. You would avoid him like the plague. Your own feelings would not allow you to associate with him. Do I make myself plain?"

Dangerous. She did not speak for a long minute. "Thank you, Michael," she said at last, very quietly but her hands were locked tightly together. Michael went back to "Is there more tea?" he asked in his natural tone.

Tuck poured a cup with shaking hands. Michael bent swiftly and kissed her as he took his cup. She bit her lip to keep the tears back. Bunny turned round. Her voice was firm and controlled. in which the words Mr. Michael and lunch were mentioned. But Tuck did not hear. She turned the key in her bedroom door and flung it open.

Marie Murchison, her lips trembling, her eyes black, was standing in front of the open window. Her hands were clasped tightly together.

Tuck surveyed her. "Good morning," she said weakly. "Your servant is — is — a creature."

"I've always rather liked her, myself."

Mrs. Murchison's voice shook. "I am looking for the bathroom," she said. "She asks me nothing. She turns the key and laughs. Laughs! At me!"

Tuck shook her head sympathetically. "That would have been terrible. Naturally, you couldn't have been expected to know that we've moved the bathroom since you lived here."

Behind her in the hall, Bunny choked. The angry woman at the window heard. She burst into a flood of Gallic tears, tears of rage and fear mingled. "It is terrible, what I am suffering," she sobbed. "They tell me my husband is dead. I know it is not so. I know he has—has left me for another woman. The shame—it is more than I can bear. It is awful. I cannot tell anyone. I cannot confess it to them. I come here to get the proof—the proof that he has done so. And this is how I am treated!"

"I'm sorry," said Tuck soberly. "We do know what you are going through, Mrs. Murchison. It must be dreadful. But what possible proof of your husband's action could you find in the bathroom?"

That brought on another outburst. When she was intelligible, the woman said, "It is not in the bathroom. I do not know where you have put it, but I want to seek in your bedroom for it." She lifted her face. "There!" she said defiantly. "Now you know the truth. You are keeping something from me which should be mine, and I have a right to look for it. I have a right to look for it!"

"I don't know what you mean, Mrs. Murchison."

The black eyes stared, then the lids fell secretly. "I think you do."

"Why do you think that?" She shrugged her shoulders. "There is no use beating about so. No use at all. I know that you found what my husband had hidden in the house."

Tuck surveyed her levelly. "Why didn't you come and ask for it, Mrs. Murchison, if it was really something important to you?"

"You know what it was. You know why I do not come and ask. It is something to be ashamed of, my husband's love letters from another woman."

Heywood Broun Spent Career Trying to Right Injustices

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—I had intended to write today about something which at the time seemed important. But I have forgotten what it was now, because the first edition comes up from the press room and I find that Heywood Broun is dead.

Clapper

Many others knew Heywood Broun more intimately than I knew him and are better qualified to pay him tribute, yet he meant something to me, and I think to you, whether you have read his column every day or never read it.

Within this amiable soul was wrapped a most passionate sense of outrage at the world's injustices, large and small. Broun was restless and troubled, and in this he reflected his time, for despite the brash confidence of the youthful Mr. Dewey, the world is out of joint and more than cooling optimism is needed to make it right.

In his last months he sought the shelter of an ancient faith and tried to find in the Roman Catholic church that anchorage which had eluded him throughout his tempestuous life.

Heywood Broun was a follower of lost causes—or were they lost? Sometimes it seemed he was only being perverse. As he used to say, he saved himself the hard labor of thinking by finding out first where he was standing, and then taking the other side. There was more to Broun than that.

He was an inveterate joiner of committees and groups. Let two or more persons approach with a grievance and he was ready to go on their committee giving his name and often his time, to the cause.

Often he seemed to become entangled in causes. I think he led the American Newspaper Guild far outside its legitimate field of wages and working conditions when it began endorsing the Spanish Loyalists, the Roosevelt administration, and WPA. I never joined the guild, partly for that reason. But then I never was much of a joiner. Some of my Republican friends, suspecting that I had a Communist streak because I have been sympathetic to the purposes of the New Deal, checked up on me and discovered that the only party affiliation I ever had was in Kansas where in 1920—God knows why—I was registered as a Republican. Newspaper writers are better off without entangling alliances.

Whether I agreed or disagreed with Heywood Broun, I have always valued him as a public force.

quoted as saying in a recent speech that the New Deal objectives are probably even worse than the methods.

"Make no mistake about it," he said, "fascism, communism, nazism and New Dealism all come out of the same box."

Such utterances make the British Tories look like Red Communists. Conservatives in England saw long ago that government had to do things that it formerly avoided, and the Tories set about to do it themselves rather than have the social-laborites take charge.

When strong voices like Weir's are raised in behalf of turning the clock back a generation, answering voices are needed. Broun's was stilled too soon.

Ex-Convicts Will be Able to Find Jobs at New State Farm

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—The proposed camp for discharged and paroled prisoners who are unable to find jobs when they are released to society today was accounted for as another experimental social project which may be listed among the long list of contributions to public welfare policy originating in Wisconsin.

Work will be begun soon, state officials said today, in changing the state transient camp at Camp Keweenaw, in northern Forest county, to a prison project under the direction of the new state department of public welfare. Prisoners will be sent there soon after Jan. 1 to clear land and expand the property so that it will be ready for use as a rehabilitation project at the beginning of the 1940 farming season.

It is planned to send those discharged or paroled prisoners who are unable, or unwilling to return to free society to the camp where they will be paid from state funds for their labor. It is expected that most of the operations will be in farming. Products will be sold to other state institutions, in order to provide the funds for wages.

World Raise Crops State agricultural experts in a preliminary survey have suggested that the new farm would be able to produce good crops of potatoes and such other products as flax, for use in other state prisons and asylums, and that beef cattle may also be raised there.

According to state prison officials, at least 35 per cent of the prisoners paroled from Waupun remain at the prison because they are unable to obtain jobs upon their release. In addition, there are a number of men who have obtained absolute discharges who have also chosen to remain, some of them at present transient camps.

Purpose of the new project, announced a few days ago, is put by Director Frank C. Klode of the welfare department this way: "We have found that most of these men want to live a normal life but there is little opportunity for them to do so with a $10 dollar bill, no job, and the stigma of an ex-convict. In other cases we grant a parole to a man whom we believe the prison has done all it can for. But, under the law, we cannot allow the man to leave the prison until we have a job for him, and our parole officers are not able to find jobs. As a result, these men stay in prison, nursing a grudge against society in general."

Finns Fighting Soviet Army In Arctic Area; Danish Report Says Russian Battleship Sunk

chinese-gunned supply columns and troop rest areas in Russian territory, while land forces made a successful offensive north of Lake Ladoga.

"The enemy launched heavy attacks in great force on the (Karelian) isthmus front," said the communiqué, which did not mention the battleship. "The main Russian attack took place between Muolajarvi and Kaukjarvi. The enemy suffered losses of men, and numerous tanks were destroyed."

At least 200 Russian tanks have been reported captured during the 21-day hostilities.

The Finns held in military secrecy the location of the new line in the gale-swept Arctic, but it was understood it would be south of Lake Inari near Ivalo.

Report Finns Retreat This was about 28 miles southwest of Vientenniemi, where a Russian motorized detachment had forced its way from the northern corridor.

Dispatches from this front said the Finns were driven back, although Helsinki observers pointed out the advance of the motorized unit did not mean the area was occupied by enemy forces.

An estimated 12,000 Soviet troops were reported pouring into Salmijarvi, Arctic mining area which the Finns desolated before retreating.

The Russian army was said to be erecting hundreds of pre-fabricated houses hastily. It was understood material for the houses were transported by trucks from Kola, near Murmansk, to prepare for a long Arctic campaign.

From the Norwegian border, Russian campfires were visible along a 400-mile front. Radios played out entertainment for the soldiers.

Russian Claims Reports that Kuolajarvi and other points along Finland's "waist-line" had been occupied in an effort to cut the country in half could not be confirmed officially.

The Russians reported 21 Finnish airplanes were shot down in the days' aerial encounters.

"A group of ships of the Baltic fleet successfully shelled coastal batteries of the area of Bjorko" on the Gulf of Finland, the army communiqué said.

About 20 Soviet planes dodged behind cloud banks to make the first raid in the Helsinki area since the early days of the war. Air sirens sent capital residents scampering from public buildings into underground shelters. The streets were cleared in three minutes.

An all-clear signal was sounded in about 45 minutes, and soon the streets were filled with Christmas shoppers.

The return of Helsinki residents from "safe" country areas for the holiday season caused officials to renew warnings against the danger of bombings.

Student Actors Competent In German Version of Play

PAGEANTRY, fluent German and more than competent acting combined to make the annual Christmas play of the German department of Appleton High school a workmanlike production Monday evening. Parents, grandparents and friends of students in the department very nearly filled the main floor of the auditorium to see the German version of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Miss Sophia Haase, German instructor, directed. Genevieve Schaefer, who carried the title role, was a graceful and charming princess. Ruth Gust, as the wicked queen carried her regal part with the proper dignity and malice. Fred Heinritz was the prince charming of fairy book fame who rescues the princess; David Bliss, the prime minister; and Robert Alice, the kindhearted hunter.

The seven dwarfs, although uniformly costumed in red tunics, brown trousers and red pointed shoes, succeeded well in differentiating their individual characters. Even members of the audience who could not understand the German enjoyed themselves identifying Sleepy, Dopey, Grumpy and the rest of the famous crew. The parts were taken up by Margaret Baunier, Inez Deschler, Shirley Miller, Alvin Brown, Barbara Ehr, Oscar Boldt and Frances Wheeler.

Queen's Court
Members of the queen's court were Robert Pelton, Esther Hultner, Gladys Lust, Barbara Rosebush, June Kuehnstedt, Robert Bayley, Peter Petersen, Joseph Markes, Margaret Ruth and Helen Fox. The dancers who appeared to Snow White and the dwarfs as they slept were Miriam Carlson, Grace Christensen, Betty Collins, Miss Fox, Dorothy Gerlach, Billie Kolb, Etta Manning and Alice Zuehlke. The voice of the mirror was Frances Galpin.

Especially effective was the staging of the entire play. Real pine trees made up the forest, the beds of the dwarfs were all lined up and the queen had her royal throne. The massing of groups in the court room scene and the dance was unusually skillful. Perhaps the most memorable scene of all was that of the bier of Snow White against a background of trees and the dwarfs kneeling sorrowfully in front of it.

Costumes and properties were collected by Miss Irene Bosserman, German instructor, with the assistance of Miriam Carlson, Miss Rosebush, Mildred Lenz, Dorothy Runge, Jeanne Ruhlend and Pat Connelly.

Properties committee; and Miss Lust, Ramona Yohr, Miss Kuehnstedt, Miss Hultner, Peggy Ogilvie, Margaret Lally and Janet Jones, the costume committee.

Stage Committees
Miss Kathryn Fralish, speech instructor, directed the arrangement of the setting. On her construction crew were Donald Jones, June Weisgerber, Russell Meertz, Markes, Jane Gee, Constance Vaughn, Don Reitz, James Germanson, Sheldon Larsen, Riley Solie, James Sherry and Ned Young. Jack Burroughs, art instructor, planned the lighting effects.

Miss Ruth McKennan, head of the speech department, and Miss Alice Petersen, English instructor, directed the make-up committee which consisted of Miss Jones, Miss Lally, Mary Kay O'Keefe, Judy Marston, Leo Griesbach, Mary Jane Thoms, Mary Ellen Notaras and Miss Manning. Miss Eileen Hammerberg, physical education instructor, trained the dancers. The cards of admission were printed by Sager and the announcing was done by Arlene Greb and Inez Werth.

Between scenes German folk melodies and Christmas carols were sung by Miss Lust, Miss Galpin, Beatrice Huebner and Marion Rehlander. David Bliss, accompanied them at the piano.

Readings, Yule Music Feature Guild Program

VERGREEN trees and poinsettias decorated the chapel of Monte Alverno retreat house last night for benediction which preceded a program for Monte Alverno Retreat House guild and guests. About 80 persons attended. A girls' octet from St. Mary Catholic High school, Menasha, sang "Silent Night" and "Adeste Fideles" under the direction of G. W. Unser. The group included Helen McKenzie, Appleton; Patricia Spaulding, Mary Helen Landgraf, Dorothy Reimer, Locella Mattern, Jeanette Schmidt, Dorothy Spaulding and Justine Baumann, all of Neenah and Menasha.

Mrs. Raymond Peeters sang "Ave Maria" accompanied by Mr. Peeters and the benediction hymns were sung by a group of boys trained by Farrell Hussey who presided at the organ. Bob Albrecht sang the solo, "O Salutaris," and he and Frank Deane had "Lawrence Konz formed a trio for the other hymns. "Holy God We Praise Thy Name" was sung by the entire assembly.

After a short business meeting in the recreation room, community singing took place and a clarinet quartet composed of James Kettenhofen, Robert Pack, Robert Griesbach and Ben Kluba, gave several selections.

Mrs. Gerald John gave two readings in English piece entitled "Mrs. Mole," and a Christmas selection. The girls' octet sang, "I Passed By Your Window" and "Kentucky Babe," and the program closed with community singing led by Mrs. Peeters.

A nominating committee was named to include Mrs. Walter Zwickler, Mrs. Frank Groh and Mrs. William Ferron for election in January.

There will be a low mass at 7:30 Christmas morning in the retreat house chapel for members of the guild and their families. Miss Mary Kay Steinberg will be vocal soloist and there will be string music.

Spectacular Death Planned by Young Man Out of a Job

Pittsburgh—(P)—A jobless young man gave advance notice today that he would end "my worthless life" some spectacular way at midnight Christmas eve.

"In doing so," he said, "I hope I awaken the people of this vicinity to the fact that there are young people out of work who are also human, but are in that well-known position of unemployment."

"If my act just brings employment to one young person I will have done more good by killing myself than I have been able to do throughout my whole life."

The death threat reached the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in a letter bearing only the signature of "A disappointed American."

The newspaper got two clergymen to reply and published their pleas that the man give up his plan of self-destruction and seek their help.

Murder Suspect Admits Slaying Former Friend

Confesses After Baffling Chicago Detectives For 10 Weeks

Chicago—(P)—A youthful gun enthusiast who successfully matched his wits against seasoned detectives for 10 weeks was held today as the confessed slayer of a one-time friend.

Captain Thomas Harrison announced that Carl Erickson, 23, confessed last night he shot and killed Herbert Wolff, 28, and then told how he defeated a lie-detector test and circumvented a ballistics test of the death weapon.

Erickson is a member of the Illinois National Guard, the police said, having been with the 122nd Field Artillery for six years. He was considered an expert marksman with both rifle and pistol.

But it was Erickson's imperfect knowledge of firearms that eventually led to the confession, Captain Harrison said.

Wolff was slain with a pistol Sept. 28 while asleep in a garage where he worked as an attendant. Erickson was seized for questioning but provided an alibi through a roommate, George McKenna, who testified both were sleeping at the time of the killing.

WISCONSIN WEATHER

Partly cloudy to cloudy tonight and Thursday. colder tonight northwest and west central portions.

GENERAL WEATHER

The storm which was central over eastern Wisconsin yesterday morning has moved slowly northeastward and now overlies eastern Lake Superior. This disturbance has been attended by general precipitation during the last 24 hours over the north central and eastern states with heavy snow falling over northwestern Wisconsin and upper Michigan. However, generally fair weather prevailed this morning over most of the southern states and from the plains states westward.

It is colder over all the central and plains states, but temperatures are rising over the northern Rocky mountains.

Mostly cloudy and continued cold is expected in this section during the next 24 hours.

Several foreign plants flourish wild on the Outer Banks of North Carolina, the seeds brought there in dirt clinging to ship ballast rock.

What he told her further aroused the suspicion of investigators, Captain Harrison said.

Confesses Shooting

He took Wolff and his wife into his apartment a year before the slaying, assisted Wolff in getting employment, and finally quarreled with him over his "ingratitude."

On the night of the slaying he crawled over the sleeping McKenna went to the garage and killed Wolff, and returned to bed without awakening his roommate.

To circumvent a ballistics test of the revolver he destroyed the rifling inside the barrel by rubbing it with an abrasive.

To defeat the lie detector he rehearsed carefully his statement to the police and the answers to anticipated questions.

Policewoman Helen Bowden was credited with a major share in the investigation. Learning that Wolff once had a girl-friend in Ottawa, Ill., the policewoman induced a friend to pose as the sweetheart and thus gain Erickson's confidence.

Congress' Help Is Promised in Reforestation

Congressional Committee Completes Hearing At Madison

Madison—(P)—Members of the joint congressional forestry committee were enroute to Washington today with recommendations and suggestions of more than 40 persons who testified at the committee's two-day hearing on problems of the cut-over forest land areas of the middle west.

Rep. Hampton P. Fulmer (D-S.C.), acting chairman, declared as the hearing ended yesterday that testimony would provide the basis for "broad, constructive legislation which won't harm any group, but help all of them."

He said the committee would discuss its findings with heads of the United States department of agriculture, of which the forestry service is a branch, before making recommendations to President Roosevelt and congress on or before April 1, 1940.

The committee at its final session heard recommendations of Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, and Missouri officials, including Rep. Stephen Bolles (R-Wis.) and Rep. Frank Hook (D-Mich.).

Pledging support to "every economically sound reforestation measure," Bolles advocated further development of the farm wood lot because of timber value and drought protection.

"Every farm should have a wood lot," he declared.

Assemblyman Henry J. Berquist (Prog.) Rhinelander, urged establishment of a joint federal-state agency to handle reforestation and rehabilitation and continuation of government forest purchases.

"The problem was brought on by de-forestation," he declared. "It must be solved by re-forestation."

Relating research accomplishments of the United States forest products laboratory here, Director C. P. Winslow said southern pine was found practical for newsprint, writing and wrapping paper manufacture.

Raymond C. Calkins, of Ironwood, Mich., and Rep. Hoop recommended the government purchase 400,000 acres in Gogebic and Ontonagon counties in Michigan, lease it for private logging under government control, and dedicate it for recreation during regrowth. Process of private logging would be applied against the purchase cost.

They said the land was being devastated by private companies which refused to "cooperate" in selective logging.

Dr. H. A. Beuhler, Missouri state geologist, suggested relief and WPA funds be used for re-forestation which he described as the "only measure for lasting rehabilitation."

Other witnesses were E. A. Mayes, of Jefferson City, Mo., H. J. Latsen, Mason county, Mich., Louis Zoersch, Tall City, Ind., and Henry Wiley, Escanaba, Mich.

Resigns U. S. Post To Become Secretary Of Pulp, Paper Group

Washington—Earl W. Tinker, assistant chief of the forest service who was responsible for the establishment of the lake state national forest region in 1929, is resigning his present post to become executive secretary of the American Pulp and Paper association, the agriculture department has announced.

Tinker's new duties, starting in New York Jan. 1, will be to coordinate the activities of 22 associations in the United States concerned with pulp and paper production. It is pointed out that this industry has almost doubled in the past 15 years.

As regional forester for the nine national forests in Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota, Tinker had his headquarters in Milwaukee. Under his leadership the north central region inaugurated one of the largest tree planting programs on record. Recently, Tinker has been concerned with promoting governmental cooperation with states and individuals, supplying forest trees at a minimum cost, and insuring fire control.

Christmas Shoppers' Haste Is Police Department's Headache

Appleton police aren't getting a great deal of help from some pedestrians during the annual Christmas shopping chaos on College avenue.

A policeman's job of coordinating machine and pedestrian traffic at busy corners during the Christmas season is tough enough; but the antics of some of the shoppers is bringing out gray hairs on the officers' heads.

An observer who stands at one of the College avenue intersections during the late afternoon rush this Christmas week doesn't have to wait long for a discouraging display of too much haste and too little regard for traffic lights and officers' signals.

Here a woman puts down her head and forges across the pavement directly against the red light, while a truck driver takes 500 miles off his tires with a screaming stop. There a man defies the policeman's order to remain on the curb and does a nifty but dangerous piece of broken field running through machines that would bring him down to stay if he were struck. And now comes a bunch of boys sprinting down the sidewalk and across the intersection, laughing at attempts to regulate their crossing.

Do you blame an officer for getting a bit testy now and then?

McNutt Group Will Start Delegate Drive

Indianapolis—(P)—Frank M. McHale, chairman of the organization backing federal security administrator Paul V. McNutt for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1940, said today a drive for delegates favorable to McNutt nomination would be started immediately after the holiday season.

McHale added in a statement that in states where the name of President Roosevelt might be entered by his friends "we will make no effort because our campaign is predicated upon the well-known policy that if the president chooses to run again, Mr. McNutt will not be an opposing candidate."

McHale also said that in states which have favorite son candidates the delegates will be asked only to "look favorably upon our candidate" after discharging "their obligations to their friends."

Snowfall Gives Renewed Hope of 'White Christmas'

Cloudy, Slightly Colder Weather Predicted for Tonight, Thursday

Yesterday afternoon's heavy snowfall and intermittent snow flurries today spurred hopes for a "white Christmas" in Appleton and vicinity. Most of the snow melted as it reached the ground yesterday and only thin patches remained today.

Cloudy and slightly colder weather is predicted for tonight and tomorrow.

The storm yesterday left 12 inches of snow at Park Falls and 8 inches at Marquette, Mich. Most of northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota received a heavy coating. Precipitation in Appleton amounted to .05 of an inch.

Forecasters C. E. Dunn of the Chicago weather bureau said a cold air mass was centered over Manitoba and the Red river valley. He said this would spread southward and eastward and although it would not bring extreme cold, it would drive the mercury down closer to normal than it has been so far this month.

Highest and lowest temperatures during the 24-hour period preceding 9 o'clock were recorded at the extremes of that period. It was 41 degrees at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and 39 degrees at 9 o'clock this morning, according to charts at the power plant of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company. The thermometer on the roof of the Post-Crescent building registered 25 degrees early this afternoon.

Maximum and minimum marks in the nation yesterday as reported at official weather bureau stations were 84 degrees at Los Angeles, Calif., and 10 degrees at Williston, N. D., according to the Associated Press.

Y Camp Directors Map Parley Plans

Preparations for Institute Will be Made at April Meeting

Four camp leaders representing the Wisconsin area of the North Central Camp Directors met yesterday at the Appleton Y.M.C.A. to arrange the program of the April meeting of the entire area when final plans will be set for the summer session of the Camp Directors' Institute.

C. C. Bailey, boys' secretary of the Appleton Y, was appointed to plan the pooling of traveling expenses of the distance traveled. For the last two years the summer institute of the North Central area, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin, has been held in Dubuque, Iowa, but a site nearer the Twin Cities is desired. Wisconsin, Minnesota, and La Crosse were two suggestions offered at the meeting yesterday.

Elmer Ott, Milwaukee, state Y.M.C.A. camping head, and Don Hitchcock and Jack Appleton, boys' secretaries of the Fond du Lac and Green Bay Y's respectively, were the three camp leaders who met with Mr. Bailey.

14-Year-Old Girl Is Singing Star of New Victor Herbert Film

The audience that saw a special preview of "The Great Victor Herbert" at the Rio theater last night came away humming the beloved melodies of the great composer and commenting on the incredible beauty and range of a 14-year-old girl's voice.

The story is not a biography of the American composer, but it is one in which his character and personality are forcefully presented by Walter Connolly and in which the lives of a man, a woman, and a child who came within his influence are given unusual dramatic treatment.

These parts are played and sung by Allan Jones, giving one of his greatest performances, Mary Martin, in her first screen appearance, and Susanna Foster, the 14-year-old girl whose voice is certain to receive the nation's attention.

Dairy Improvement Program Discussed at Courthouse Parley

Cheesemakers and helpers from Outagamie county gathered at the courthouse last night to discuss the dairy improvement program and its relation to the cheese industry.

L. G. Kuenning, chief of the dairy division of the college of agriculture at the University of Wisconsin, who was present at the meeting, reported today that the cheesemakers evinced "considerable interest" in the program and are ready to cooperate.

Various aspects of the program were reviewed at last night's meeting.

David Nusbaum, dairy extensionist from the college of agriculture, was present at the conference, attended by about 50 men.

The limit was pretty high this morning when he came out to his garage. He found a mother police dog carefully attending to the needs of 10 brand new puppies. Mr. Burton doesn't know from whence the mother dog came and just why she chose his garage for the great moment, but he would appreciate any clues as to her owner.

Good Fellows Will Spread Yule Cheer

have been carefully scrutinized and their needs ascertained. In most of the 200 homes, there are small children, who are the greatest sufferers when Christmas brings nothing "extra." These children know through association with other youngsters what Christmas means to the average American child. The fact that their parents are economically unfortunate, through illness, had luck, or other causes, doesn't mean that they are not entitled to Christmas joy—and their parents to all the help that can be mustered.

So much has been said of late of the "American way" of doing things. The American way has no better example than that set by Good Fellows, who not only make their own families and friends happy at Christmas time but remember others who would otherwise be forgotten; others who do not have relatives and friends to make their Christmas a joyful one.

There is always room in the Good Fellows membership and there is always a place for additional contributions. The sum of $700 must be collected in order to help the neediest families in the city. There are other homes which are greatly in need of this help. Anything beyond the $700 will be used to spread this Christmas cheer even wider.

Honor Roll of Good Fellows

Contributions to Good Fellows club crept to $235.50 this noon, still far short of the minimum amount necessary to provide Christmas baskets for the two hundred or more families on this year's list. The list of Good Fellows, printed herewith, is exceptionally short this year. There still are hundreds of men and women in Appleton with means sufficient to be Good Fellows. Now is the time.

Valley council scoutdom today hailed the first real snowstorm of the year and Clarence H. Engberg, council executive, remarked that the office is "all set to receive registrations for winter camp."

The mild December weather was all very nice, but it hasn't done much to remind council scouts that there will be a winter camp period at Gardner Dam Dec. 26-30.

The snowfall indicated that the seasons aren't going backward, as suspected for some time, and that the valley council camp on the Wolf river will offer the winter sports that it has in past years. Of particular interest to scouts is the manner in which the new semi-natural swimming pool has turned into a perfect skating pond.

Council to be Asked To Vote on Primary

Alderman Frank Weinkauff has framed a resolution to be submitted at tonight's common council meeting, asking a primary election in the spring.

If the council votes to hold a primary election, candidates for the various city posts may take out nomination papers beginning Thursday under the laws governing elections.

Dog Faithful Even as Master Goes to Jail

Omaha, Neb. (AP)—A bulldog in a bullpen is as dangerous as the proverbial bull in the china shop, three Omaha policemen learned.

Officer Jesse Kuncel tried to put a prisoner in the bullpen. The man's dog protested. In a general free-for-all Kuncel emerged with a bite on the ankle, Officer Robert Carlen with a bite on the hand, and Officer Frank Yost with a badly snagged uniform.

The dog went to the humane society, the prisoner stayed in the pen, and the officers sought a doctor and tailor.

Police Phone Number Popular With Gamblers

Fredericksburg, Va. (AP)—"Numbers" gamblers here apparently bank heavily on the police.

When officers came into possession of a half-dozen books used by the number most frequently played was 108—the telephone number of police headquarters.

'Dummy' Hotel Is Used in Training

Eggs are Made of Plaster-of-Paris, Toast Is Varnished

Miami, Fla.—The hotel guest rings for ice, and the bellboy brings a pitcherful of alldiuminum-painted wooden cubes.

At breakfast the waitress serves two plaster-of-paris fried eggs and three slices of inner-tube bacon. The toast is real but slightly old—it has been varnished for durability.

The uncomplaining guest pays his check—with bogus money.

No one is trying to be funny. For the hotel's 330 occupants it is a serious business indeed.

Get Actual Practice—All of them are students in a hotel training course conducted by the county school system's department of trade and industrial education. Their prospects of getting a job in one of metropolitan Miami's 430 hotels depend largely upon how well they perform their chores.

Few, however, flunk out. Director H. R. Cole says 90 per cent of the school's graduates, during its nine years of operation, have been assigned jobs worth a total of $2,000,000.

Instruction, provided for a nominal registration fee, is given only to residents of Florida for 12 months and of this county for six.

Some of the instruction is in classes, but for two weeks before a students gets his diploma he must perform under fire in a real hotel borrowed for the purpose during the off-season.

The "guest" writes a report detailing the quality of the service he receives from maids, bellmen, waitresses, housemen, busboys, cashiers, clerks, switchboard operators, and even elevator operators.

'Report Card'—A typical report:

"No morning paper brought to room 810. Breakfast served by No. 11 very good. Bellman service slow, 30 minutes for ice; service of ice by No. 6 good. Bell captain very good in description of drive to Key West. Bellman No. 8 did not ask name or service wanted on laundry. No. 1, acting as doorman, gave good description of races, but very confusing directions. Service of lunch by No. 15 good. Maid did not remove stale ice water when cleaning room."

The proper technique is taught for every kind of service, even to the manner a bellboy should carry luggage and the method of knocking on a door. Maids are instructed to rap with only one knuckle.

Good feet are indispensable in hotel work, but eyeglasses are a liability. They may hamper a bellboy handling bags, and steam collects on them when waitresses go into the kitchen.

"Besides," said an instructor, "people just don't like the looks of glasses on boys in the lobby."

The funeral services of Mrs. Henry Emons, who died Sunday, were held Wednesday morning from the Brett Schneider Funeral Home at 8:30 and at 9:00 at St. Joseph church. Burial was at St. Joseph cemetery. Casket bearers were: Chris Schink, Mike Spiel, Sylvester Liech, Joe Kneice, Joe Schink, and Frank Kneice.

Pegler Offers Some Ideas On Popular-Priced Thinking

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Quite a lot of books have been written in the last few years on the subject of thinking, and as one of the leading thinkers of the period I might offer some helpful suggestions. I am what you might call a Sears-Roebuck thinker, which is to say that I think in enormous volume on an amazing variety of subjects. Mine are not de luxe thoughts, but they are good and sturdy and give satisfactory results on the whole, being marketed through a rather extensive list of branch outlets around the country. The fastidious, intellectual trade gives me very little play; also some of the aristocratic occasionally appear with an idea or opinion of mine picked up just as a lark while out slumming, or with something of mine which has been run up in expensive wordage, retaining, however, the original lines. I suppose I could sue them for infringement, but it would be hardly worth while, as by that time I am thinking of something else.

Some of the stylish, custom thinkers who work over each thought with extreme care, often spending weeks on a single lovely little job of ratiocination, think that I think trash, but I don't care to go that far. I admit I don't ratiocinate. It takes too much time, and have to turn it out six days a week, including some days when raw materials aren't very good and the mechanism is creaky.

Moreover, the class thinkers refuse to handle many of the subjects which might be carried in a popular-priced variety line. They are like those old-fashioned apothecaries who give you a look if you ask for a percolator.

I carry percolators, alarm clocks, stationery, office supplies and bathing caps, and you can get chow mein or the blue plate at the soda fountain.

I am not Sears-Roebuck, any more, you will notice, but a chain of drug-department stores. It may sound to you as though I have got my ideas confused, hopscotching around that way, for Sears-Roebuck to the drug-department store line, but that isn't it. A thinker in my line of business can't spend all his time on one thought. People want variety. Next paragraph I might be the five-and-ten I never know from one paragraph to another.

Sometimes Looks in on the Swank Thinkers

Sometimes, just to keep up on things, I read some of the swank thinkers. You have to do that occasionally I press my nose against the pane to see what Walter Lippmann is thinking, or Jimmy Sheehan, or old man Villard, who is a progressive but keeps the same old carved black walnut intellectual fixtures and high ceilings, generation after generation that way, for Sears-Roebuck if you asked him to think up something about a big heavyweight fight just to catch the trade.

I also take a peek at Hamilton Fish Armstrong and Clarence Street, but if you want to know the honest-to-God's truth, with most of their thoughts I can't tell the pants from the coat.

I started out thinking just the easiest kind of little thoughts, and although, in later years—since I turned pro—I have sometimes thought about communism and economics—I have avoided complications which would ball up things and spoil the product. I just refuse to try to fit in thoughts which conflict with my own. It is the best way, I find.

If a Communist or an economist wants to think something else, that is all right. They can work their side of the street, and there will be no trouble unless they start picketing me, saying what a punk line of thinking I turn out. But if they start shooting ballbearings through my window, why, all right, let's go to town. Just because they think differently, is that any sign they think better?

Regular Customers Might Balk at too Much Class

I don't know whether I will get out of the popular line. Naturally, I would like to handle some imported goods, because they do give a place class. But, on the other hand, my regular customers might back away, and that is no percentage for a lot of Ph. D's. They are always criticizing, and, moreover, intellectually speaking, they press their own pants and cut their own hair and never give a commercial thinker a chance to make a quarter.

But I suppose old man Woolworth envied Tiffany, and I admit that I have a somewhat similar feeling about some of the exclusive thinkers, such as this Reinhold Niebuhr, who last week thought up something special for the nation about the Russian invasion of Finland.

"To condone Russian politics of recent months," he wrote, "on the ground that it is merely power politics in a world in which the power game is still being played and in which defensive necessities require participation in the game, counters the criticism of only those moral purists who are under the illusion that politics can be sublimated into an exercise of pure moral suasion."

Man, that's thinking!

Washington—Friends of John D. Wickhem, Wisconsin Supreme Court justice, reported that he was being considered for appointment to the supreme court of the United States to succeed the late Pierce Butler.

They described him as a "Democrat, Catholic, liberal and midwesterner."

Wickhem who is 51, is a former professor of law at the University of Wisconsin. He practiced for a time in Milwaukee and was appointed to the state supreme court by Governor Walter J. Kohler in 1930.

Attorney General Murphy, who had been considered a likely choice for the appointment, said at a press conference last week that he thought he ought not receive it and that others were better qualified.

Aldermen Suggest Change in System For Assessments

Menasha Committee to Investigate Possibilities of Full-Time Assessor

Menasha — The Menasha council Tuesday night named a committee of three members to investigate the possibility of securing a full-time assessor to replace the present system under which two men are employed on a part-time basis.

The matter was introduced by Alderman Walter O'Brien who advocated a reassessment of the entire city. He suggested that data be collected on John to base action.

Alderman John R. Scanlon reported that he has been trying to secure data from various full-time assessors in the past week but that this is a busy time for them. Scanlon declared that he did not think he would have the desired information until the latter part of the week. Alderman M. F. Crowley and Edward C. McKenzie, city attorneys, were named to work with Scanlon.

It will be necessary to amend the charter ordinance if the change is made. The council will have to act on the change at an early meeting in order to make it effective by the time of the April election.

Auto Bids Rejected

Three bids for a new police department squad car were received and all were rejected. Two bidders failed to enclose certified checks with their bids and were not considered on that account. Walter O'Brien, chairman of the police committee, said that it was too late to take any action on purchase of a new squad car. He suggested that the council buy new tires, make repairs on the old one and "let it ride." The present squad car has traveled about 44,000 miles.

Alderman Edward Zeining introduced a motion to readvertise for bids, returnable Jan. 2, which was passed. In response to a question about the condition of the car, the squad car, Police Chief Alex Slomski said he wouldn't run them if they were on his own car. Because of the need for the car, the aldermen voted to insert a provision calling for immediate delivery of the new car in the specifications.

On recommendation of the board of public works, the council approved installation of curb and gutter on Appleton street from Third street to Seventh street. A petition requesting curb and gutter on Fifth street was accepted and placed on file. An objection to sidewalk assessment on DePere street, filed with the council a month ago, was disallowed on recommendation of the street and finance committees.

Committee Meeting
The aldermen discussed approval of the Plowright plan but decided that further information was necessary before taking action. The owners will be asked to meet with the council at a committee of the whole session.

William Ebel, owner of property necessary for the proposed plan, also will be asked to attend the committee meeting. Because of the proposed Kimberly-Clark expansion, William DeBruin pointed out that advantage of having suitable building lots available and urged early action on the approval of the plan.

On recommendation of the police and fire commission, the probationary period of William Aktulewicz as a member of the Menasha fire department was extended 90 days to March 23, 1940. Ernest Krul was dropped from the regular list at the end of his probationary period Dec. 31. Because it is impossible for him to serve, David Voss was relieved of call fireman duties.

Alter Street Status
The council adopted a resolution removing the section of Racine street from Ninth street to Third street from the county highway system. As a result the city will receive $130 a mile per year from the state for care of that section of the street instead of $65. City Attorney McKenzie reported. It is necessary to replace the street, and city and state will have to bear the cost.

The aldermen empowered the board of health to cooperate in a campaign to exterminate rats in the city. The city will take care of the city dump while businessmen are cooperating in the extermination campaign in the rest of the city. The formula used by the firm will not harm dogs or cats but is supposed to exterminate approximately 90 per cent of the rats and will be effective at least nine months.

City Attorney Edward C. McKenzie reported that the bond of $100,000 on the city treasurer and of $1,000 on the bookkeeper are sufficient. He also advocated discontinuance of the bond on the street superintendent as supplies no longer are sold by that department. The police chief will be bonded for $1,000 as required by state statute.

Menasha — St. John grade school cagers scored a 23 to 10 victory over the Holy Name team in the Catholic boys conference at Kimberly Tuesday afternoon. Milwaukee Country Day School to Meet Neenah Neenah — Principal J. H. Holzman announced today that the Neenah High school football team will meet Milwaukee Country Day school during its 1940 schedule. The game will be played here Sept. 28. A 2-year contract has been signed between the two schools, and in 1941, the game will be played at Milwaukee.

Two Church Choirs Will Present Yule Program Thursday

Neenah — St. Margaret Mary junior choir and the First Methodist church choir will present Christmas music over the amplifying system Thursday, the former organization singing carols and hymns at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and the latter at 7:30 in the evening.

More than 100 children in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the public schools, under the direction of Miss Ruth Roper, presented the program this afternoon and this evening the First Presbyterian church senior choir is scheduled to sing.

People living in all parts of the city are able to hear the amplification of Christmas music which is being sponsored this season by the Neenah Junior Chamber of Commerce and under the direction of Mrs. H. F. Schell, First Methodist church organist. The programs originate from the chapel of the First Methodist church and are amplified through loudspeakers on top the National Manufacturers Bank, Bergstrom Paper company and St. Paul's English Lutheran church.

The Christmas music program closes Saturday night.

Difficult Mass to Highlight Sunday Midnight Service

'Regina Pacis' to be Presented at St. Patrick Catholic Church

Menasha — The Rev. Joseph Ahearn, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic church, is planning special Christmas services with the midnight high mass Sunday evening and one of the outstanding musical features will be the singing of the difficult mass "Regina Pacis" composed by Pietro A. Yon.

The mass, translated as "Queen of Peace" was written in honor of St. Vincent Ferrer and is founded upon and developed from a theme of Gregorian chant, "Attende Domine, et miserere." The Regina Pacis is one of the seven masses written by Yon whose wide knowledge of liturgical music is used to bring a heavy broad style with the beauty of choral treatment to the mass. At present Yon, who was substitute organist at the Vatican and Royal Church of Rome, is organist at St. Patrick's cathedral in New York.

Marvin Kaiser, fond du Lac, director of St. Patrick's choir in Menasha, has arranged a program which is to begin at 11:30 Christmas eve.

Organ Prelude
Miss Dorothy Gemmel, organist, will offer a short organ prelude, playing, "A Christmas Cradle Song" by Carol Boheman and "Jesu Bambino" by Yon. The adult mixed choir will sing "Silent Night" and "Adeste Fideles" with "Silent Night" played also as a chimes solo.

The program of the mass proper will be as follows:
The Introit, "Dominus dixit ad me" with Father Laque as cantor with all response in 4-voice harmony by the choir; the Kyrie from the mass, the Gloria in Excelsis, the Gradual, "Tantum principium." The gospel and sermon by the celebrant of the mass, Father Ahearn, will follow. The credo from the mass will be sung as an alto solo. The offertory by the choir will be "Loetentium coeli (Let the Heavens Rejoice) and the "Hodie Christus Natus Est" by Korman, a composition with soprano solo to which in 4-voice accompaniment is hummed, "Silent Night." The Sanctus, Benedictus and Agnus Dei from the mass will conclude the service.

Choir Personnel
The personnel of the choir includes Miss Naomi Backus, Miss Joseph, Miss Joan Hickey, Miss Genevieve Hickey, Miss Mildred Kleopfel, Miss Ethel Champagne, Mrs. Marvin Kaiser and Mrs. H. J. C. Rosenow, sopranos; Miss Ethel Harold, Miss Marjorie Schommer, Miss Alvina Zelinski, Miss Dorothy Berndt, Mrs. Ivan Stip, Mrs. R. J. Keefe, altos; Father Laque, Marin Meyer, George Champagne, Frank Popline, Salvatore Porto, tenors; Walter Pierce, C. E. Cass, John Kemmeter, Gerald Anderson, James Shea, Glen McParlan, Henry Jung, Adolph Hyson and Lee Freund, basses.

Mildred Kleopfel, Mrs. Rosenow, Mrs. O'Keefe, Mr. Meyer, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Jung, Mr. Shea and Father Laque will be soloists. Masses for Christmas day will be midnight mass which is the high mass, low masses at 6 o'clock, 7 o'clock, 8 o'clock, 10:30 and 11:30 and high mass at 9 o'clock.

COLLISION ON BRIDGE
Menasha — Two cars collided on the Mill street bridge at 7:50 Tuesday night, Police Chief Alex Slomski reported this morning. The cars were driven by Gilbert Young, 213 Kaukauna street, Menasha, and Lorraine Eckrich, 642 Broad street, Menasha. The Eckrich car was slightly damaged.

The Twin Cities office of the Appleton Post-Crescent for its editorial, circulation and display advertising departments is located at 510 N. Commercial street, and the telephone number is 4100. News items, copy or orders for display advertising and orders for subscriptions may be left at the office or telephoned. SCHOOL CHILDREN JOIN IN JUNIOR RED CROSS MOVEMENT

Menasha — Forty-two youngsters from seven Menasha schools attended the first council meeting of the Menasha chapter of the American Junior Red Cross Monday afternoon at Elsie D. Smith library and heard messages on international good will. Each group elected a chairman who has been delegated to inform the rest of his schoolmates about the meeting. Indian Weapons are Found as WPA Crew Seeks Gravel for Road

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau Oshkosh — An Indian cache containing a rare copper knife, tomahawk and spearhead has been discovered by a crew of WPA workers north of the Winnebago state hospital. The men were stripping sod in search of gravel for building a roadbed when they unearthed the corroded weapons of the Winnebago.

Arthur Kannenberg, curator of archaeology at the Oshkosh public museum, says the tomahawk has eight tally marks inscribed upon it. He thinks its original owner may have used this method of keeping score of his victims.

Copper was highly valued by the Winnebago Indians. Its brightness, malleability, scarcity and effectiveness as a weapon made it a highly-prized metal. Because of this, valuable copper implements were often buried by the Indians to prevent their becoming lost or stolen.

The weapons unearthed at the hospital site are comparatively rare in Wisconsin. They were in a remarkably good state of preservation considering their age—approximately 100 years old.

Menasha Cagers To Play Truckers In League Contest

Bluejays Will Seek Victory Friday Night

Menasha — Menasha High school cagers will seek their second victory in the Northeastern Wisconsin conference Friday night when Clintonville High school invades the Menasha gymnasium. The Bluejays are in a tie for first place in the league as a result of their upset victory over Shawano while the Clintonville team occupies the customary spot in the league cellar.

However, the Clintonville team is not regarded lightly by Coach Leslie Anson and in drills this week he is emphasizing that the Jays will have a battle. The Truckers are weak defensively as they have been in the past but this year they are showing more scoring power than in recent years. Zemske is their leading scorer although there are several other 6-footers on the squad.

The Bluejays probably will not be in top condition for the game as several have been handicapped in drills this week by colds and illness. Ray Wippich, center and leading scorer, has not been out for practice at all this week. In fact, he has not been in school. Dean Younger, reserve center, will be out of town for the next two weeks and will not be available for either the Clintonville game or the Neenah game Dec. 23.

Title Clash Looms
If the Bluejays get by Clintonville and Neenah comes through with its expected victory over West DePere, the two teams will clash for the league-lead at Neenah on Dec. 29.

Clintonville has dropped three games in the conference. Kaukauna won 37 to 23, New London won 38 to 19 and Shawano ran up the most decisive score, 42 to 16.

Reserve teams of the two schools will clash in a preliminary game at 7 o'clock Friday night while the varsity contest will start at 8 o'clock.

Allies Expected To Send Planes, Guns to Finland

cluded the United States—urging that they align any assistance with the league's efforts. It was uncertain whether they would be invited to supply anything except non-combatant relief.

Paris press reports that the possibility of effective aid to Finland was uppermost in the considerations of the allied supreme war council at a three-hour meeting yesterday encouraged Finnish quarters to believe the allies would put sharp teeth into the league's moves against Russia.

Much Support Finns

A council communiqué, however, did not mention any decision on the Finnish question, but editorial writers today stressed the view that for strategic reasons alone Finland's cause must be the allied cause.

If Russia conquered Finland, they declared, Germany would follow up with an invasion of Norway and Sweden, winning both valuable resources and "one of the master positions of Europe" from which to fight the allied blockade.

The French government, looking toward prosecution of the war in 1940, last night asked the chamber of deputies finance committee to approve military appropriations for first three months of the year totaling $5,034,000,000 francs (about $1,265,000,000).

The government estimated 249,000,000 francs (about $57,000,000) might be needed to finance war operations for the entire year.

OLD ARMY GAME

Maryville, Mo.—(P)—It probably doesn't amount to much in these days of stream-lined infantry units but Charles Still, of Maryville, has discovered a line in an old record book that has a lot of hidden blisters in it.

It tells of a record Companies A and B of the 4th Missouri Infantry set in 1916.

They walked from San Ynacio to Laredo, Tex., during the days of the "Mexican incident," a distance of 45 miles in 15 hours.

It broke all marching records of United States troops.

SEEMS LOGICAL

Topeka, Kans.—(P)—The usual penalty for declining to testify in court is a stretch in jail or a fine. But recently, a non-talking witness who came into Judge Warren Shaw's court got away with it. He was a convict, "borrowed" from state prison. "You can't send a man to county jail for contempt when he comes from the penitentiary," ruled the judge.

Veteran Harness Racer, Struck by Auto, Dies

Oxford — Hiram McNutt, 72, one of the deans of Wisconsin harness racing, died here yesterday several hours after an automobile struck the sulky he was driving and pitched him out onto the roadway.

Physicians said McNutt died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

He had been an owner and trainer of harness horses for many years and owned a number of brood mares, several of which were nominated for the 1940 and 1941 Wisconsin futurities. McNutt raced several horses to Wisconsin track records, his Early Dawn holding a one-mile mark of 2:10 1/2 over a half-mile course.

He was a member of the Wisconsin Breeders' association and of the Wisconsin trotting club.

Survivors include son, H. F. McNutt, and a brother, Henry.

Rookies Grabbed Many Honors In National Football Loop

THE National Football League's finest collection of prize rookies dominated the 1939 race for individual ground gaining and forward passing championships, according to official figures for the year announced today. Every individual forward passing mark went by the boards as seven standards were broken, in addition to one ground gaining record.

The forward passing race was the most thrilling of the major league circuit ever witnessed with the title and new records hanging on the final meeting of the season between Davey O'Brien, Philadelphia, and Parker Hall, Cleveland. Hall had the better in this game and gained the title with a season's marksmanship of 126 completions in 206 tosses for 1,222 yards, 11 and nine touchdowns. This recruit from the University of Mississippi broke the former season's completion record by 25.

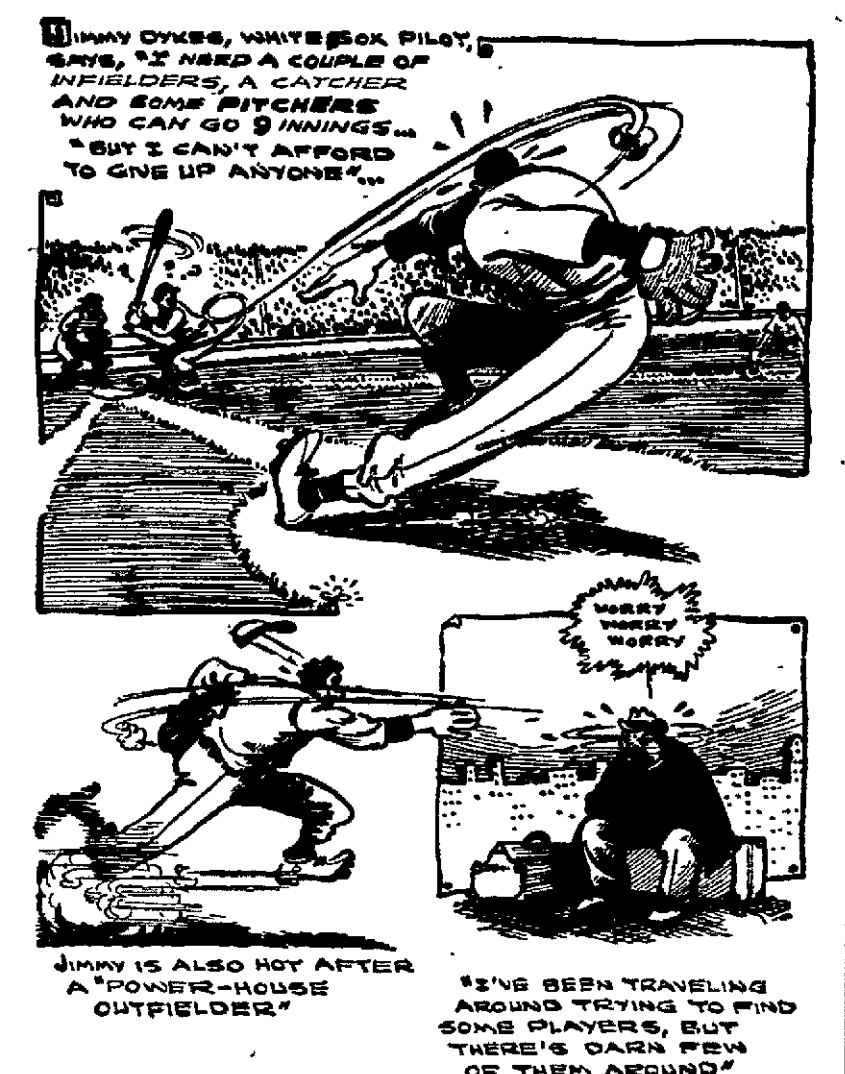

O'Brien Breaks Three

O'Brien, chosen all-league quarterback in his first pro year, broke three marks. He completed 99 out of 201 for 1,324 yards and six touchdowns. His yardage broke the eleven game mark of 1,127 and also the twelve game mark of 1,239. He also completed 21 passes against the Bears, a new one-game mark.

Other passing marks were made by Frank Filchock, Washington, 61.7 per cent efficiency; Dwight Sloan, Detroit, only 3 interceptions in one season; and Filchock to Andy Farkas, Washington, 99 yard touchdown gain on a pass. The aerial championship was so well contested that Ed Danowski, Giants 1938 champion failed to finish within the first ten this season.

Earl Mack Has Spent 15 Years Under His Father

(Eds Note: This is the second of two stories on Connie Mack and his plans for his son.)

PHILADELPHIA — The next ruler of baseball's house of Mack — Connie's second son, Earle — has been learning baseball at dad's knee for 15 years so he can step in as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics when his father retires.

The A's without a Mack would be like a ship without a rudder, and Connie has arranged for his 47-year-old son and assistant to take the helm. When that will be only Connie knows. He will be 77 two days before Christmas but "retirement" isn't in his vocabulary.

The fact that someday will fill Connie's brogans ran the bases of

Bob Feller May Try His Hand at Movies

Des Moines, Ia. — Bobby Feller may become a "celluloid cowboy." The youthful Cleveland pitching ace and Van Meter, Iowa's number one citizen today became the object of a Hollywood producer who wants Bob to take prominent parts in a series of six westerns.

The proposition was presented by George Goodale, former Tulsa, Okla., newspaperman who asked Bob to take a series of screen and voice tests for the Hollywood company.

The unaffected Iowa youth, as popular at home and off the diamond as he is in the major leagues, isn't at all sure he wants to face the Kleig lights.

Feller talked it over with close friends here and made known the fact that he will do nothing that might decrease his efficiency on the mound, or detract from his popularity in baseball.

Kotal's Teachers Beaten at Winona

Winona, Minn. — The Central State Teachers of Stevens Point, Wis., were unable to match shots with the Winona Teachers and lost a basketball game here last night, 46 to 37.

Superior — A powerful Superior Teachers cage squad scored a crushing 62 to 35 victory over the Dakota State basketball team here last night.

O'Brien, chosen all-league quarterback in his first pro year, broke three marks. He completed 99 out of 201 for 1,324 yards and six touchdowns. His yardage broke the eleven game mark of 1,127 and also the twelve game mark of 1,239. He also completed 21 passes against the Bears, a new one-game mark.

Other passing marks were made by Frank Filchock, Washington, 61.7 per cent efficiency; Dwight Sloan, Detroit, only 3 interceptions in one season; and Filchock to Andy Farkas, Washington, 99 yard touchdown gain on a pass. The aerial championship was so well contested that Ed Danowski, Giants 1938 champion failed to finish within the first ten this season.

Boy Scout Progress Out-of-Doors

BOY SCOUT PROGRESS

In February the Boy Scouts of America will have attained the ripe old age of thirty years. They have long held a high place in this country and have contributed a wealth of pleasure and education to many of our outdoor-minded fellows.

The major appeal of Scouting is the outdoor appeal. There is an alluring background to an organization which devotes so much time to outdoor life and to outdoor adventures. The Scout program has been a sound one and has contributed to practically every community.

It may be a trifle early to write of the Scout movement and achievements, but too much cannot be said of them. Leaders in every walk of life have supported the Scouts for they know that when Scouts grow up they make good sane citizens. The Scouts are not a problem. They keep off the streets, learn discipline, and obey the rules of law and order.

The Boy Scouts of America were incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia in 1910, and opened their headquarters in New York City. President Taft accepted the office of first Honorary President, and all of our presidents since have been strong supporters of the Scouts movement.

Within two years scouts had been enrolled from every state in the union. The later growth has been in keeping with the first success of the movement and there are Scout troops and members in practically every city and hamlet.

As the Scout organization grew more features were added to improve the troops and to offer more to the members. Many interesting insignia of the Scouts are recognized by anyone.

In 1919 the first National Boy Scout Week was held and all faiths and creeds joined in to make it a success. The first National Conference of Scout Executives was held in 1920. International conferences have also been held since that time. It is now said that the organization has grown to a membership of 3,305,149 an increase of 493,075 since 1937. All outdoor men will hope the growth continues. The Boy Scouts make good sportsmen and conservationists.

U. W. CAGE BRIEFS

Ted "Nervous" Strain came through last season for the University of Wisconsin cage squad when the pressure was on him because of the lack of backcourt talent. His greatest liability is his light weight, but he makes up for this deficit with a great deal of fire and spirit. Because of his experience of last season and his ball handling ability he may start the opening game opposite Rundell although he faces the onslaught of the sophomores with the rest of the veterans once the season gets under way.

Cafego Looks Good In Tennessee Drill

Knoxville, Tenn. — Their first work-out since they were invited to the Rose Bowl has brought Tennessee's Volunteers visible assurance that their ace ball carrier, George Cafego, will be right and ready to take the field against the Trojans of Southern California.

With a brace protecting his injured right knee, Cafego participated in a light drill yesterday as the Vols began day preparation for the New Year's game at Pasadena.

George's liveliness pleased Coach Bob Neyland, who indicated, however, that his star would be spared from scrimmages that might put the healing knee out of commission again.

"George looked better than at any time since he was hurt," Neyland commented. "But I don't think we'll take any chances of reinjuring the knee in scrimmage."

Mighty Seabiscuit Found to be 'Right'

Los Angeles — There's additional joy in the Charles S. Howard stable. The mighty Seabiscuit, it appears, is "right" again.

The "Biscuit" in his first public workout in months, gave the clockers a thrill, yesterday afternoon when he traveled 3/4 of a mile in 34.1 seconds and finished out a half under restraint in 42 seconds.

Many stables would be joyful enough if they had Kayak II, Howard's winner last year of the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap and an outstanding candidate to repeat.

But it was Seabiscuit's performance which pleased Tom Smith, his veteran trainer. It was his first speed test since he went lame Feb. 14, and he wound up sound.

The Howard star—robbed twice of victory in the handicap by margins of a nose—is some $37,000 short of Sun Beau's all-time money winning mark of $376,744.

Chandler Picks Nine For M. U. Trip East

Milwaukee — Nine players have been chosen by Coach Bill Chandler of Marquette University to make the trip to Pittsburgh for a basketball game against Duquesne University tomorrow night.

Chandler said that after the final home practice session he would pick a tenth man to leave with the squad tonight. The squad, in high spirits after last Saturday's victory over Wisconsin, went through a workout yesterday that had Chandler smiling.

Those already chosen for the trip were:

Forwards — Bob Deneen, Johnny Goodyear, Bill McDonald and Bill Rogers; centers — Ralph Amstern and Matt Reichl; and guards — Jim Reavley, Bill Komenich and Bill Staufeld.

About 40 Persons at Christmas Party at Clintonville Library

Clintonville — A Christmas party entertained about forty members of the Clintonville Woman's club and invited guests Monday evening at the library club room. The room was adorned with two lighted Christmas trees and other holiday decorations.

The program included a number of Christmas carols by the high school girls' glee club, under the direction of Miss Edith Gray. They sang "Deck the Halls with Boughs of Holly," "O Come All Ye Faithful," "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" and "Silent Night, Holy Night." A reading from Dickens' "Christmas Carol" was given by Mrs. F. C. Welch. The principal speaker of the evening was the Rev. W. H. Wiese, who brought a Christmas message. His talk dealt with the spirit of Christmas and he urged his listeners to try to extend the holiday spirit over a longer period than only for a few weeks each year.

The evening closed with the serving of refreshments by a committee consisting of Mrs. Donald Russell, Mrs. Ward Winchester, Mrs. T. A. Patterson and Mrs. Henry Korb. In charge of the program and general arrangements were Mrs. Francis M. Higgins, Mrs. James Smiley, Mrs. John Buehrens and Mrs. George McCauley.

Grain Trade Enjoys Merriest Christmas Season in Years

Chicago — White figures chalked on the board of trade's blackboards and denoting the prices of things farmers have to sell explained today why the grain trade is enjoying one of the merriest Christmas seasons in years.

Those gleaming numerals told a story of almost unparalleled market action the past three weeks in the Chicago pits, center of the world's grain business.

Millions of dollars have been added to the market value of important farm commodities. The best grain business in more than two years, coming just in time for Christmas, has cheered men who scarcely a month ago were discouraged by the poorest trade they had known in two decades.

Since the last days of November prices of wheat, rye, soy beans, corn and oats have staged one of the most spectacular advances in market history. Wheat has risen about 24 cents in three weeks, rye 26 cents and soy beans 29 cents. Dollar wheat was back on the blackboard and prices of all commodities, except corn have been quoted this week at the highest levels in about two years.

To farmers with large stocks, higher prices meant more cash income from marketings. The only forlorn aspect was the fact that the price rise, particularly in wheat, has been based at least partly on a crop calamity in the southwestern winter wheat belt. Because of an unprecedented fall drought, farmers may have very little grain to sell at high prices in 1940.

Clintonville Woman Feted On Her Ninetieth Birthday

Clintonville — The ninetieth birthday anniversary of Mrs. Augusta Klemm was observed at a gathering of relatives and friends Sunday, at her home on Eighth place. Mrs. Klemm was born on a Sunday ninety years ago. Dinner and supper were served to a large number of guests. Children of Mrs. Klemm who visited her Sunday were: A. B. Klemm and Mrs. Bertha Miller of Wausau, Mrs. Herman Hall, of Gresham; Mrs. Clara Heinrich of Antigo; and Miss Frieda Klemm of this city. Another daughter, Mrs. Herman Koenig of Pittsfield, Mass., visited here two weeks ago being called by her mother's illness. A son, Robert Klemm of Blinnwood was not able to be present Sunday.

Before moving to this city 12 years ago, Mrs. Klemm lived for many years on a farm in the town of Bear Creek. She has been unusually active for her advanced age until a few weeks ago when she became ill.

Mrs. J. W. Devine was hostess to her contract club Monday afternoon. A 1 o'clock luncheon was served at her home, after which two tables were in play.

The American Legion auxiliary gave its annual Christmas party for the Junior auxiliary Monday evening at the Knights of Columbus hall. Gifts were exchanged and refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mesdames Gilbert Buckbee, Evan Vaughn, R. F. Braun, Henry Laux, Harry Peotter and Lena Ruddy.

During a brief business session which preceded the program, plans were completed for the distribution of Christmas baskets to needy families. This will be done on Saturday by the rehabilitation committee. It was also voted to send magazines to the veterans' hospitals.

Past noble grands of the Rebekah lodge were guests at a Christmas party given Monday evening by Mrs. Louis Johnson and Mrs. Martin at Third street. A 7 o'clock dinner-luncheon was followed by games, at which the high prize was won by Mrs. W. H. Schmidt.

Miss Vera Zuelke of Waverly Iowa is expected to arrive here Friday to spend the holidays at the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Welch.

Mrs. J. E. Long will leave Saturday morning for Chicago to spend Christmas at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. Z. White.

Mrs. and Mrs. Jordan Juettlen expect to visit relatives over the weekend at Antigo, their former home.

The Junior Woman's club held its annual Christmas party Monday evening at the Odd Fellow hall. A covered-dish supper was served, the tables being decorated in keeping with Christmas. Seven tables of bridge followed the meal, honors at contract going to Mrs. Leo Polzin and Mrs. Carl Rulshof, while high score at auction went to Miss Esther Hawke. There was a Christmas tree and gifts were exchanged. The committee on arrangements for the party included Mesdames John Kafka, Harold Feuer, Donald Olson, Arthur Schwandt, Merton Annenson and Melvin Kerstner.

Mrs. John Below entertained her card club at a Christmas party Tuesday afternoon at her home on route 1. Five hundred was played at three tables, after which a chicken dinner was served. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Henry Korb, first; Mrs. William Stichman, second; Mrs. Mrs. George Below, travel. Gifts were exchanged.

AIR PRESSURE

Air is all around us, and at first thought we might suppose it had no weight. Tests have shown, however, that it does have weight.

Before this, I have told how the air in a tank can be weighed. First the tank, full of air, is placed on a scale. Let us say it weighs an even three pounds. The air is pumped out of the tank, and we look at the scales again. They show a weight of only two pounds and 12 ounces! So we know that the air which was pumped out had a weight of four ounces.

Parts of mighty pump used in London's water system. (Note automobile in background.)

To find the weight of air in a room, we may figure one and one-fifth ounces for each cubic foot. It is a bit more at sea level, and a bit less at half a mile above sea level, but one and one-fifth ounces will be a fairly close figure.

In a little room eight feet square with a ceiling eight feet high, there would be 512 cubic feet. The air inside such a room would weigh 33 pounds and six ounces.

If air did not have weight, a balloon could not rise. A balloon is filled with gas lighter than air, and that fact gives it lifting power.

The pressure of air is not the same thing as the weight. Tests have shown that air pressure can force water to rise in a tube. It can raise the water as much as 34 feet.

The pressure of air is due to its weight all the way from the top of the atmosphere to the bottom. At a height of 10 miles air is extremely thin, and has little weight. Below that level, it keeps gaining weight per cubic foot. The total pressure at sea level is 14 and seven-tenths pounds per square inch.

Air pressure is used in some water pumps. The pumps are made in such a way that air is taken away from a certain space; then air pressure makes water rise to fill the space.

Some pumps do not use air pressure for lifting water. They have wheels are turned by gasoline or electric motors. They can produce a strong flow of water, and can force the water through city water pipes many thousands of feet long.

Among the gigantic water pumps which have been built is one in London, England. It is so large that there is plenty of room for an automobile in one pipe-like part of it.

The London pump has the power to pump 280,000 gallons per minute. In one second of time, it can send 17,500 gallons of water along the way to meet the needs of the people of a great city.

'Ararat' Is Among New Library Books

Fiction Volumes for Holiday Reading Released For Circulation

New London—Heading the new fiction for holiday reading at the New London Public Library this week is "Ararat" by Elgin Groves. The action of the book, which traces the years from the Turkish massacres of 1895 to the close of the Russian revolution, centers in that cradle land of races that lies between the Black and the Caspian seas, of which Ararat is the focal point. It is the story of a meek and gentle people, their struggle to preserve their identity, and of their lost and homeless children. It centers around two sons, each representative of the extremes of human nature: Amos Lyle, a Texas cowboy turned missionary, and Paul Markov, an officer in the Russian Imperial army.

"Power for Sale" by John Knittel deals with the establishment of a great power plant and the engrossing experiences of the young and idealistic engineer who owns it. Susan Ertz's talent for creating character and amusing situations is at its best in her new novel, "One Eight More," which revolves about Theodore Darrell and his three grown daughters. The story is packed with high comedy and suspense, delicious situations and fascinating intrigues, according to reviewers.

A bright and beguiling old Mexican lady whose tranquil villa becomes the stage for complex and exciting human drama is the extraordinary figure of Arthur Davidson Fieles' book, "Mrs. Morton of Mexico."

An unusual cross-section of New England, wherein a small country town becomes surrounded by the homes of commuting New Yorkers and city-bred artists, is presented in "Rain Before Seven" by Margaret Bailey.

"The Town Cried Murder" is a new mystery thriller by Leslie Ford.

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—Consider the case of Hattie McDaniel, the rotund, middle-aged negress who plays Scarlett O'Hara's mammy in "Gone With the Wind." You've seen her often on the screen, these past ten years, in incidental comedy roles—laughed at her and dismissed her from mind without a second thought. I defy you to treat her as casually in viewing GWTW. For Hattie, with one of the greatest dramatic performances of all time, steals that picture.

Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable, Thomas Mitchell, Olivia de Havilland—each score with near-perfect characterization. But long after I've forgotten their work, I'll still see the emotion-wracked, ebony face of Hattie, tears coursing down her cheeks as she pleads for Olivia de Havilland's help outside the room where Scarlett and Rhett's baby lies dead. The most prejudiced critic alive could not watch her work without admitting that it is acting at its artistic best.

And where does this negro artist go from here? Why, back to playing incidental, comedy maids, of course. An actress comparable with the immortal Marie Dressler has flashed like a dark meteor across the screen—and now must disappear because Hollywood can't give her adequate parts. No one's to blame, least of all the producers who would ask nothing better than to capitalize on her ability.

But I don't think it will be easy for me to laugh at Hattie's comedy in the future, for I'll never be able to overlook the tragic fact that a very great artist, whose skin unfortunately happens to be black, is being wasted.

IDOL CHATTER: In Norma Shearer's opinion a canoe in the moonlight isn't nearly as romantic as a Raft. Add reasons why I like Jeanette MacDonald: her instinctive urge to defend an absent friend from the claws of Hollywood's

Status of Cigaret

Vendors to be Argued

Madison — Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppmann will hear arguments Friday on application of Milwaukee operators of a permanent injunction restraining state officials from classifying them as wholesalers.

Under the cigarette tax law wholesalers must pay a $50 license fee, from which retailers are exempt. Judge Hoppmann issued an order yesterday temporarily restraining Treasurer John M. Smith and John W. Roach, head of the beverage tax division, from collecting wholesaler fees from vendors.

Attorney Michael Klein, representing Ralph Turrell and other Milwaukee operators, filed the petition. He said he was not challenging constitutionality of the law, but was disputing the attorney general's ruling that machine vendors were wholesalers.

The Kaukauna office of the Appleton Post-Crescent is located in the Jules Mertes barbershop on Wisconsin avenue. William Dowling is the correspondent in charge and the telephone number is 107. Subscribers may call this number until 6-30 in the evening if their papers were not delivered.

Council to Take Bond Issue Bids On Power Project

Utility Superintendent
Urges Prompt Action
To Get Best Rates

Kaukauna — Financing of the power project was considered by the common council at its meeting last night, with bids for a bond issue of $140,000 to be submitted at the Jan. 2 meeting.

H. F. Weekwerth, utility superintendent, told the aldermen that bond market conditions were now good, and that delay in floating the issue might mean a higher interest rate. The issue will be the only indebtedness of the utility, Weekwerth said.

Alderman Oscar Alger said he had the impression that no borrowing was to be done by the utility for the project. Weekwerth replied the council had already approved a loan of $90,000, which was to have been raised in the event the city received a similar PWA appropriation. Ethan Brewster, utility commission member, said the utility setup could not in two years take care of expenses in building the power plant.

Delivery by Feb. 10
The aldermen agreed to call in $14,000 of bonds each year, with the issue callable in three years: A premium equal to one year's interest is to be paid to bondholders if the bonds are called before their maturity. The successful bidder is to pay for the legal opinion and other costs, and the bonds are to be delivered by Feb. 1.

The council voted to advertise for bids on compensation insurance for the city and utility, and will open the bids at a special meeting Dec. 29, as the present policy expires Jan. 1. Alderman T. L. Seggelink, chairman of the finance committee, to which the insurance question had been referred previously, recommended that the insurance be placed with a mutual company, a transfer which he said would save about $800 annually. Alderman Otto Ludtke, Alger and Jule Mertes objected, saying that good service had been received from the company represented by the local agent, and there did not appear to be sufficient reason for a change.

Seggelink replied that the mutual company wrote 60 per cent of all Wisconsin compensation insurance, and thus must give satisfactory service; that the failure to save $800 was not doing the right thing by the taxpayers.

All the councilmen supported Alger's motion that bids be advertised for. Previously a letter from Emmet Roban, local attorney, was read, in which the writer said that state statutes provided for bids when contracts of more than $500 were involved. Harry F. McDrews, city attorney, said the statutes stated nothing about buying insurance, and that advertising for bids was thus nothing more than a matter of council policy.

Increase Allotment Of Winnebago County Soil Depleting Acres

Post-Crescent/Oshkosh Bureau Oshkosh — Winnebago county farmers may plant 95,519 acres of soil depleting crops during 1940, according to figures on soil allotment released by the county agricultural soil adjustment administration here today. This allotment represents an increase of 1,948 acres over that of 1939—about an acre per farmer.

This year 2,200 farmers in the county participated in the program and received benefits totaling $108,000. The program will be operated in the same manner in 1940. A new feature, the distribution of an aerial photograph of his farm to each participant, will be inaugurated next year, Clair Markert, soil administration official, announced.

Since the program went into effect in 1936, Winnebago county farmers have received $382,000 in benefit checks, Markert estimates. Allotment figures will be sent out the first week in January and the Oshkosh office will begin signing up members by the middle of the month.

Group Attends Wausau Meeting

Calumet County Farm Leaders Take Part in Plans for Dairy Program

Chilton—Orin H. Leverenz, chairman of the agricultural committee of the county board; Henry Heiman, chairman of the soils conservation committee of Calumet county; Albert Merbach, president of the Sherwood Shipping association; Herbert Harder, 4-H club leader of Chilton town; Oscar Meyer of the town of Stockbridge and A. L. McMahon, county agent, Chilton, attended the conference on dairy programs at Wausau Monday.

The conference was made up almost entirely of representatives of the various farm organizations throughout the state, including the Dairy Party League which is made up of a group of business men from the northern part of the state.

Congressman Hull was the chief speaker and he discussed some of the difficulties that the dairy legislation had encountered in Washington and some of the obstacles that would arise in securing the enactment of any legislation designed to establish a parity price for dairy products. He said the dairy block in the house of representatives at the present time is made up of only 63 members.

The conference decided that a committee be appointed with representatives from each of the farm organizations throughout the state to work out a dairy program and a campaign of activity for bringing it before congress.

Find Upward Trend in Output Of Wisconsin Cheese Factories

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Changing manufacturing techniques, improved mechanical facilities, and the shortening of distances by the modernization of transportation all have had their effect on the number of cheese making establishments in Wisconsin, department of agriculture studies showed today.

Although cheese making is still an essentially individualistic and decentralized business in Wisconsin, the number of factory units has declined sharply during recent years, while the amount of production per unit has risen correspondingly. The trend has been discernible for more than a decade, and state economists expect that it will continue for several more years at least.

The centralization trend is shown in the fact that in 1921 and 1922, the high point in the development of the industry in Wisconsin, the state had almost 3,000 cheese factories. Today there are about 1900. It is the first time since 1910 that the number has dropped below 2,000, the department said.

Production per factory unit has risen correspondingly. It was shown from less than 50,000 pounds for each factory annually at the turn of the century, the average has gone up to more than 175,000 pounds today.

The upturn has been rapid during the last few years and it appears that the trend toward larger output per factory still continues, the department observed today in a statistical report.

Probably the most important cause for such a development, according to agricultural economists at the capitol, is the fact that the automobile has widened the trading area of the individual factory so that competition in a given area which formerly had a large number of factories has become more keen. Improved methods and machinery meanwhile has made possible greater patronage at each plant.

Map Temporary Code For Barbers in State

Madison — (P) A temporary fair trades practice code for barbers will be established this month, Fred M. Wylie, code counsel for the department of agriculture, announced yesterday at the end of a hearing at which approximately 100 barbers voiced opinions on standards and prices.

Another meeting will be held here Jan. 22 to draft permanent regulations. Wylie said insufficient funds were available to enforce a permanent code and that the temporary measure would give tradesmen opportunity to pay their dues.

Raising the price of haircuts in Milwaukee on Friday and Saturday was the principal change suggested in the code which expired last April 30.

Try to Push Building Of Low Cost Houses

Washington — (P) The federal loan agency, through Administrator Jesse H. Jones, announced Tuesday that the RFC mortgage company would purchase up to $2500 loans made to finance the construction of new houses.

The plan, officials said, was developed in an effort to stimulate the construction of low-cost homes. Jones said the RFC mortgage company would purchase Class 3, title one, loans bearing 4 1/2 per cent interest and a service charge of 1/2 of 1 per cent, where the entire proceeds are used to finance new homes, the construction of which is to be started after Jan. 1, 1940.

Officials said the willingness of the RFC mortgage company to purchase

AMERICAN CRUISER RESCUES COLUMBUS SURVIVORS
The White House announced that the American cruiser Tuscaloosa (above) discovered the German luxury liner Columbus sinking outside the American neutrality zone more than 400 miles off the coast between Norfolk and New York. The Tuscaloosa picked up survivors from the big liner, which sailed recently from Vera Cruz, Mexico, and was reported to be taking them to Ellis Island.

Commission Hears Testimony Given For Water Utility

Grand Chute Officials
Seek to Establish
Water District

The public service commission at Madison Tuesday heard testimony submitted by town of Grand Chute officials pointing to the need of a water utility for the unincorporated village of Belle Heights.

Representing the village were Emmett O'Connor, chairman of the town; Wayne Rowan, town clerk; Joseph Witmer, attorney; John Williams, a member of the town board; and Henry Buss, representing Belle Heights.

The petition of the town of Grand Chute to form a utility for the distribution of water in Belle Heights now will be considered by the service commission on the basis of yesterday's testimony and the decision will be made later.

Belle Heights must form a utility so that it may legally do business with the Appleton water utility. Water mains are being installed in the village to serve a possible 300 consumers.

Submit Schedule

Representatives of the Appleton commission submitted a schedule of rates to be charged against the town for water used and the state commission also will consider the Appleton proposal before making a decision. Rates to be charged consumers in Belle Heights will be set on the basis of the wholesale rate charged by Appleton.

The rates set up by the Appleton commission at a meeting last Saturday are: 15 cents per hundred cubic feet for the first 30,000 cubic feet; 10 cents per hundred cubic feet for the next 70,000 cubic feet, for all over 70,000 cubic feet.

Others in the cast include Frank Morgan as the mysterious Wizard, Ray Belger is Dorothy's friend, the Scarecrow, Bert Lahr the Cowardly Lion, and Jack Haley the Tin Woodman. Billie Burke is the Good Fairy, Margaret Hamilton the Wicked Witch.

A charge of $300 per year will be made for fire protection on the basis of 20 fire hydrants being installed on village streets. In addition the commission will charge the village $46.25 every three months for maintenance and depreciation of the meter measuring water used in the village.

Representing Appleton were William U. Gallaher, superintendent of the purification plant; Arthur

Progressives Plan For Appointments To Election Boards

Walter Melchior, vice chairman of the county Progressives, today asked party members seeking appointment to election boards to notify him.
